The Last Shabbos of the Year

This week's parsha, Nitzavim, always falls out on the Shabbos before Rosh Hashanah, the last Shabbos of the year. The parsha begins with "You are standing this day, all of you, before Hashem your G-d..." (Devarim 29:9).

The Nesivos Shalom brings down, in the name of the Zohar HaKodesh, that "hayom" (this day) refers to Rosh Hashanah; that Moshe Rabbeinu was telling Bnei Yisroel, "Today (Rosh Hashanah) you are standing before Hashem (to be judged by Him), in order to renew the bris with Him."

He further explains: "On Shabbos, Hashem lifts us up to become close to Him, no matter how tainted we have become from our transgressions. Even if we seem to have no hope of spiritual survival, the Ribbono shel Olam throws us a rope, a lifeline, called Shabbos." It seems that even though we may lack the zechus of attachment to Hashem during the week, He allows us to cling to Him on Shabbos, despite our many shortcomings. This is the last Shabbos of the year – let's make it the best Shabbos of the year!

Parshas Nitzavim

The Power of Selichos

My first year in the community, I went to my first ever Selichos with R' Yankie Dinovitz at his father's shul, Ohel Yaakov. I entered the shul with the fire and passion of a new baal-teshuvah, and was so excited to begin my personal journey towards the Yomim Nora'im. Soon after we began, I started to feel overwhelmed - like I was drowning - and could not wait for davening to be over. I left the shul feeling somewhat depressed, like I had somehow failed myself, and was ready to give up on Selichos altogether. Needless to say, year after year, Selichos was something with which I greatly struggled. A few years later, I approached Rabbi Goldberger with my dilemma: that I found Selichos to be a far too daunting task to endeavor, and asked him for some advice as to how to make Selichos more meaningful. His answer to me was to do my best with the liturgy and to make sure that I recited the Thirteen Attributes of Mercy with the tzibbur. Now this, I thought to myself, I could do. I decided to look into the Torah to see what it was about these Thirteen Attributes of Mercy that made them so special in our davening - in particular, as it related to Selichos.

The Thirteen Attributes were taught to Moshe Rabbeinu after he ascended Har Sinai to receive the second set of Luchos. Before Hashem gave them to Moshe, He first showed him how to prevent the sort of national catastrophe that had nearly provoked Him to destroy the entire nation after the chet haegel. He showed Moshe the method and taught him the text of the prayer that would always invoke His mercy: "Hashem, Hashem, G-d, Compassionate and Gracious, Slow to Anger, and Abundant in Kindness and Truth; Preserver of Kindness for thousands of generations, Forgiver of Iniquity, Willful Sin, and Error, and Who Cleanses" (Shemos 34: 6-7). This prayer, the Thirteen Attributes of Mercy, is recited in times of crisis when we beseech G-d to show us mercy; on Yom Kippur, fast days, in times of threatening calamity, and, in Nusach Sefard [as we daven in our shul], every day. It contains thirteen Names and descriptions of Hashem, all of them referring to His compassion in various situations (Artscroll Stone Chumash). These Thirteen Attributes of Mercy are also recited throughout the daily Selichos, and serve the same purpose of arousing Hashem's mercy and compassion.

The central theme of all Selichos, as well as of the Yom Kippur Maariv and Neilah services, is the thirteen Attributes of Mercy. As mentioned above, this passage appears in the Torah (Shemos 34:6-7) following the chet haegel. According to Rabbi Yochanan's interpretation, Moshe Rabbeinu felt that Israel's sin was so grievous that there was no possibility of his intercession on their behalf. Thereupon, Hashem appeared to him in the form of a chazzan wrapped in a tallis and taught him the Thirteen Attributes, saying, "Whenever Israel sins, let them recite this in its proper order and I will forgive them." Thus, this appeal to His mercy reassures us that teshuvah is always possible and that Hashem always awaits our return to Him. The implication is also plain that if we emulate His merciful ways, He will treat us mercifully in return (Overview to Artscroll Selichos).

The Talmud (Rosh Hashanah 17b) explains why the first two Attributes are the repetition of G-d's ineffable Four-letter Name, Hashem Hashem... This means, "I am He before a person sins, and I am He after a person sins and repents." The Rosh asks why it is necessary for G-d to show mercy before the sin; someone who is pure should not require mercy. He explains that Hashem is merciful even though He knows that someone will sin. As long as the potential sinner has not become an actual sinner, the first Attribute - Hashem - remains in place, and He continues to shower His mercy upon the person who has within himself seeds of defiance that are soon to break through the surface (ibid.).

The second Attribute indicated by the name Hashem is that G-d is merciful even after one has sinned and done teshuvah. Even after repentance, mercy cannot be taken for granted, for it is not at all reasonable to expect that a person should be able to repent from his sins and have them wiped away. Just as a criminal cannot expect regret to absolve him from all punishment, so too, a transgressor cannot logically expect to be made whole again merely because he has done teshuvah. But the Attribute of Hashem comes into play in defiance of all logic; even after the sin, Hashem is merciful and accepts our teshuvah, as if the misdeed had never occurred (ibid.).

That G-d chose to begin the Attributes of Mercy with the double use of the Four-letter Name provides an insight into man's mission, especially during the Selichos days that call out for our teshuvah. G-d uses the same Name for His mercy after the sin as before to show that a sinner can return to the state of purity he enjoyed before he stumbled. The Name is repeated because man has the challenge of coming back after he sins. Thanks to one of Hashem's greatest demonstrations of mercy, teshuvah can erase sins and bring man back to his pristine state of prior perfection.

Let us take the lesson of Selichos to heart. Hashem is merciful when we fall short of His expectations, but only if we emulate Him by being merciful to those who fall short of our expectations of them (ibid.).

The ten days between Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur are a most propitious time for introspection and teshuvah. Our hachamim teach us that this is the time of year that Hashem is the closest and most accessible to His beloved people; now is the time to reconnect to our Loving Father. May we all be zoche, through the recitation of Selichos and these Thirteen Attributes of Mercy, as well as our heartfelt tefillos, to bring about the redemption for ourselves, as well as all of klal Yisroel. In the words of Rabbi Nosson Scherman, composer of the Overview to Artscroll Selichos, "Let us begin, and may this year's Selichos be climaxed by a Yom Kippur as climactic as the one when Moshe brought back the Second Luchos." A gutten Shabbos.

Standing for Something

"You are standing today, all of you, before Hashem, your G-d..." (29:9)

In the first pasuk of Parshas Nitzavim, the Hebrew word the Torah uses for "standing" is nitzavim. This is quite curious because omdim is the Hebrew word used nearly everywhere else in Chumash for "standing." Why, then, does the first pasuk of the parsha use nitzavim instead of omdim?

According to the Ramban, the word nitzavim denotes a different type of standing than we might be familiar with. He explains that Bnei Yisrael were not just physically standing up as opposed to sitting down. Rather, nitzavim means they were standing with readiness and preparedness to pass into the covenant of Hashem and become His people.

Similarly, Rav Hirsch reveals that the root of "nitzavim" is "nitzav," which means firmly standing with energetic perseverance. As a support for this, he cites Midrash Tanchuma and goes on to say: "In the face of all the dreadful suffering described here [back in Parshas Ki Savo], you remain nitzavim, standing firm and upright. All the suffering will pass over your heads, and you will outlast them all..."

After everything Klal Yisrael went through, starting with slavery in Mitzraim all the way through the difficulties in the midbar and culminating with Moshe talking to them in this parsha- on that day, the Jewish People stood firm and with passion to serve Hashem in spite of the struggles and tribulations that constantly came their way. Furthermore, the Zohar Ha'Kadosh, as illuminated by Rav Beryl Gershenfeld, tells us that the usage of “ha'yom” in our pasuk is a reference to Rosh Hashanah. This means that Rosh Hashanah was the very day that Bnei Yisrael stood with passion and preparedness to come closer to Hashem.

Every year, right before Rosh Hashanah, we need to ask ourselves: Are we simply going to be omdim and stand up a lot in shul, or are we going to be nitzavim before Hashem with passion and excitement? Our goal should be to walk into Rosh Hashanah prepared to confidently and firmly stand before our King fully ready to ask Him for another year of life in order for us to reach our potential and fulfill our unique tafkid in His world.

Although this might seem a bit challenging, we are equipped with an extremely powerful tool that can help us do exactly that: the shofar. What comes forth from the shofar is a cry and a reminder to come back to our true essence and to reconnect to a life of true meaning and purpose. It is this very sound that lets us stand with readiness and preparedness to become Hashem's people once again.

This year on Rosh Hashanah, we should be zoche to internalize the profound message of the shofar and use it to help us all truly be nitzavim - not merely omdim - before the Almighty.
