Weekly Parsha*Parshas Beshalach

By Rabbi Ozer Alport

“Miriam... the sister of Aharon, took the tambourine in her hand and all the women went forth after her with tambourines and dances.” (15:20)

“The righteous women of the generation were certain that the Holy One, Blessed is He, would perform miracles for them, so they took tambourines out of Mitzraim.” (Rashi)

The righteous women who left Egypt were so convinced that they would merit further miracles that they brought along musical instruments to play while singing praises to Hashem. I once saw a beautiful story of similar modern-day faith. There was once a tremendous draught in Eretz Yisroel which threatened to endanger that year's entire harvest, which would mean financial ruin for all of the farmers as well as possible starvation for those left with little or nothing available to eat. Communal fast days and prayers passed unsuccessfully. Finally, with little choice, the Rabbinic and community leaders ordered all Jews to the Kosel to pour their hearts out and plead for Divine mercy. After reciting several chapters of Tehillim and other appropriate prayers, the clear sky suddenly grew dark and full of ominous clouds, which shortly gave way to much-needed droplets of rain, and soon turned into a full-fledged torrential downpour. Those present were so overjoyed at the turn of events and the answering of their prayers that they didn't even care that they were getting soaked to the bone, all except for one elderly, wheelchair-bound Chassidic Rebbe who remained completely dry ... for he brought an umbrella!

The Bitter Waters

“[With] ten trials did our ancestors test the Holy One, Blessed is He, in the Midbar, as it is said ‘and [they] have tested Me these ten times and did not heed My voice’ (Bamidbar 14:22)” (Avos 5:7). Ironically, the first six of these ten trials in our Mishnah are found in this week's parsha, Beshalach. Our Chachamim identify these first six trials as follows: 1- When the Mitzrim pursued the Bnei Yisroel to the Yam Suf, the people asked “Were there no graves in Mitzraim that you took us to die in the Midbar?” (Shemos 14:11); 2- They complained to Moshe, saying, “What shall we drink?” by the bitter waters of Marah (ibid. 15:24); 3- They complained again when they ran out of food, saying, “If only we had died by the hand of Hashem in the land of Mitzraim... for you have taken us out to this Midbar to kill this entire nation by famine” (ibid. 16:3); 4- They disobeyed Moshe and left over manna “until morning and it became infested with worms and it stank; and Moshe became angry with them” (ibid. 16:20); 5- Even though Moshe told them not to do so, “It happened on the seventh day [Shabbos] that some... went out to gather [manna], and they did not find” (ibid. 16:27); 6- In Rephidim, the people formed an angry mob and contended with Moshe, saying, “Give us water that we may drink!” (ibid. 17:2). Moshe, afraid for his own life, cried out to Hashem, “What shall I do for this people? A bit more and they will stone me!” (ibid. 17:4). [The last four include: 7- the Sin of the Golden Calf, 8- the rebellion, and 9- the craving for meat and complaints against the manna in Taveirah, and 10- their belief in the spies' evil report against Eretz Yisroel.]

Since many of these incidents were blatant sins, the term “trials” seems inappropriate. Tiferes Yisroel and Tosafos Yom Tov differentiate between sins which are the result of misguided desire and those that result from man's doubts in Hashem's power or of the veracity of particular prophecies. Sins in the second category are considered a challenge to and trial of G-d. The ten sins listed in this Mishnah were of such magnitude that they “tempted” G-d to destroy His people; hence, the Bnei Yisroel tested Hashem by not listening to Him (Artsroll Pirkei Avos) and not trusting in His servant Moshe.

It is difficult to understand how the people so quickly lost their trust in both G-d and in Moshe Rabbeinu, especially since the Torah states that immediately following Krias Yam Suf, “Israel saw the great hand that Hashem inflicted upon Mitzraim; and the people revered Hashem, and they had faith in Hashem and in Moshe” (Shemos 14:26). Even though the Bnei Yisroel witnessed Hashem performing all the miracles and wonders [plagues] in Mitzraim, one could still say that it was only a natural reaction to fear the approaching Mitzri army, especially since they seemed to be trapped by the sea with no apparent recourse. But once Moshe split the sea and they crossed to safety, and saw the downfall and death of the entire pursuing Mitzri army, their faith and trust in Hashem and in Moshe should have been concretized.

Yet once they left the shores of the Yam Suf, the Torah states: “They went for a three-day period in the Midbar, but they did not find water. They came to Marah, but they could not drink the waters... because they were bitter.

The people complained against Moshe” (ibid. 15:22-24). Artsroll writes that Moshe had to force the Yidden to leave the shores of the Yam Suf. The Chachamim offer two different explanations for this seemingly strange preference. Tanchuma, cited by Rashi, comments that the Mitzri army, confident of an overwhelming victory at the sea, bedecked their horses with every manner of jewel-studded gold and silver ornaments. As a result, the Yidden were able to go away from the sea with greater wealth than they had taken from Mitzraim during the Exodus, and they wanted to remain there to collect even more booty. Moshe restrained them from this over-infatuation with material wealth by journeying away from the seashore. Zohar explains that because the Yam Suf was the place where the Yidden had achieved prophecy and seen unprecedented revelations of G-d's power and holiness, they were reluctant to leave it. Once Hashem removed His Presence from it, He rested it in the Midbar of Shur. Only then was Moshe able to prevail upon the people to leave the sea and follow him into the Midbar, so they could continue to experience closeness to the Shechinah.

The Meforshim note that water is often a metaphor for Torah, and that the Yidden neglected their Torah study (i.e. water) for three days, and this is why their spiritual level deteriorated to the point of rebellion. Kli Yakar explains homiletically that because the people were so preoccupied with collecting the gold and silver that washed ashore from the dead Mitzrim that they neglected the “spiritual water” of Torah study, their sin took shape in a physical lack of water (Artsroll Stone Chumash). Ner Uziel writes: “Seeing the precious ornaments washed up on shore, the entire Jewish nation pounced on the treasure in a headlong pursuit of wealth. As a result, even Moshe's command to decamp and take up their journey toward Har Sinai fell on deaf ears. This is poignantly reflected in the verse ‘Moshe caused Israel to journey from the Sea of Reeds’ (Shemos 15:22), which, Rashi tells us, indicates that he literally pulled them away from the jewel-studded shoreline and led them forcibly toward Har Sinai. In these verses is contained a lesson of eternal relevance: excessive regard for worldly concerns smothers man's natural thirst for wisdom and dulls his sensitivity to the beauty of Torah. The Jews' obsessive desire to gather the gold and silver obliterated the feelings of spiritual elevation they had experienced just a few hours earlier, leaving nary a trace of their newfound awareness of Hashem. All that they had witnessed in Mitzraim and by Krias Yam Suf faded in the gleam of the gold, silver, and jewels that were scattered all along the shore.”

The Torah states that “they could not drink the waters of Marah because they were bitter,” however, the Baal Shem Tov interprets homiletically that the “bitterness” referred not to the water, but to the people. It is human nature that when people become embittered, they see everything in a negative light. Because the people were bitter, they found fault with the water (Artscroll Stone Chumash). Had the Yidden been in a different frame of mind, they would not have complained to Moshe about the lack of water; rather, they could have come to Moshe and respectfully ask that he pray for drinking water on their behalf. After Moshe threw the tree that Hashem showed him into the water, the water became sweet, and the Torah says: “There He established for [the nation] a decree and an ordinance, and there He tested it” (ibid. 15:25). Rashi states that this included Moshe’s teaching of the laws of Shabbos, the para adumah, and the mishpatim (civil laws). By teaching the people Torah, Moshe was able to “sweeten the water,” both literally and figuratively. The lesson for us today is to try to avoid the snares of wealth and gashmius, and focus on what is really important: learning Torah, performing mitzvos, and living a spiritual life. A gutten Shabbos.
