Please remember to set your clocks forward one hour tonight to Daylight Saving Time. We will be returning to our weekly Mincha/Maariv minyan beginning 10 minutes before shkia.

From the Rabbi

We are all aware of the coronavirus spreading around the world. May Hashem watch over us and protect us. Please have these important things in mind regarding shul:

- If someone is not feeling well, but not contagious with the virus, they should stay home. This is always the case, so as not to expose others to illness, and certainly now in particular.
- Make sure to cover your cough or sneeze with a tissue and throw the tissue away.
- Use hand sanitizers and wash with soap for at least 20 seconds.
- The physician I consulted with did not feel that people should not shake hands in shul. That is the medical opinion I'm going to follow in our shul, at least for now. If someone does not want to shake your hand please respect their wishes and do not be offended, it's for the sake of public health. Wishing everyone good health,
-Rabbi Menachem Goldberger

Weekly Parsha

Parshas Tetzaveh

By Rabbi Oizer Alport

“And you shall speak to all the wise-hearted people whom I have invested with a spirit of wisdom, and they shall make the vestments of Aharon” (28:3)

Parshas Tetzaveh introduces us to the unique garments that were worn by the Kohanim during the time that they served in the Temple. Because these vestments were so special and holy, they couldn't simply be made by anybody who possessed the necessary skills and craftsmanship.

Hashem specifically instructed Moshe to command the wise of heart to make these special garments for Aharon and his sons. This is difficult to understand. We are accustomed to associating wisdom with the brain. Why does the Torah stress that their wisdom was found in their hearts?

Rav Leib Chasman explains that our understanding of wisdom is fundamentally flawed. From the Torah's perspective, a wise person is not a Harvard professor who is able to intelligently discuss esoteric topics in difficult academic subjects. If his actions do not reflect his sophisticated intellectual knowledge, the facts and theorems which he has stored in his head are essentially meaningless.

For example, an expert botanist who is intimately familiar with the scientific characteristics and medicinal properties of every plant and herb in the world, yet chooses to recommend and distribute poisonous plants instead of healing ones can hardly be defined as wise. He is more accurately compared to a donkey laden with a pile of thick tomes on the subject of botany. The knowledge that he has acquired in his brain remains for him an external load which has failed to penetrate into his heart.

The Torah recognizes that the primary criterion for evaluating wisdom lies in the ability to connect one's mind, and the information stored therein, with his heart, which guides his actions. It is for this reason that Hashem stressed the importance of selecting the truly wise – the wise of heart.

This concept is illustrated by a well-known, if perhaps apocryphal, story which is told about one of the famous Greek philosophers. In between lessons, his students once encountered him in a section of town known for its immoral activities (what they were doing there has not been established).

Unable to reconcile his behavior with the lofty philosophical teachings that he espoused during his lectures, his students pressed him for an explanation. The legendary philosopher answered them, “When class is in session, I am your great teacher, and I share my pearls of wisdom with you. At other times, I am not the philosopher with whom you are familiar.”

We live in a society which holds wisdom and its pursuers in high esteem. We benefit from this atmosphere which motivates us to pursue education and wisdom, as Judaism clearly places a high value on the importance of learning. Yet as we pursue our studies, it is important to be cognizant of the Torah's message about the true definition of wisdom. Parshas Tetzaveh teaches us to take care that what we study penetrates our hearts and becomes part of us so that it guides our future actions and makes us truly wise

Where's Moshe?

Just as last week's parsha, Terumah, was solely devoted to the details of the construction of the Mishkan and its components, this week's parsha, Tetzaveh, details the holy vestments worn by the Kohein Gadol and the Kohanim, namely Aharon and his sons. The parsha concludes with the construction of the Golden Mizbe'ach, the Incense Altar, which was used exclusively by the Kohanim to bring up the incense offerings. The Baal HaTurim points out that from the birth of Moshe until his death, with the exception of a few parshios in Sefer Devarim where Moshe speaks in the first person, Tetzaveh is the only parsha in which Moshe's name is not mentioned once.

Rashi (Shemos 31:18) suggests that both Terumah and Tetzaveh are not written in chronological order, and the instructions regarding the building of the Mishkan and the holy vestments worn by the Kohein Gadol were transmitted only after the cheit shel eigel hazahav, the sin of the Golden Calf, which does not occur until next week's parsha, Ki Sisa. The Sforno agrees with Rashi and explains: In G-d's original plan, there would have been no need for a Mishkan, for every Jew was to have the status of a Kohein and would have been worthy of building his own altar and being a resting place for the Divine Presence. After the cheit, however, this all changed, and it became necessary to build the Mishkan and assign the Kehunah to Aharon and his sons.

After the cheit, Hashem threatened to annihilate the Jewish people and start anew with Moshe. Moshe protested and pleaded with Hashem to spare the people, and after rebuking them the next day, he returned to Hashem and said, “And now if you would but forgive their sin!... if not, erase me now from Your book (me-sefrih-chaw) that You have written” (Shemos 32:32).

Although Hashem accepted Moshe's prayers and forgave the Jewish people, the Talmud (Makkos 11a) teaches that “a conditional curse of a righteous person will be fulfilled even if the stipulation itself does not come to pass.” We find an example of this in the case of Yaakov and Rochel. After Lavan accused Yaakov of stealing his gods, Yaakov answered, “With whomever you find your gods, he shall not live” (Bereishis 31:32). Even though Lavan never found his teraphim, Rochel died prematurely after the birth of Binyamin (ibid. 35:18) on the road to Eretz Canaan. Based on this Gemara, Rabbi Ovadiah Yosef suggests the reason that Moshe's name does not appear in our parsha is a direct result of his own “curse.” The word that Moshe used, me-sefrih-chaw, “from Your book,” can be rendered as “me'sefer chof,” meaning “from 'book' twenty.” The twentieth ‘book’ (parsha) in the Torah is Tetzaveh, thus fulfilling Moshe's request to be “erased from the book.”

Another explanation is brought down by Rabbi Lord Jonathan Sacks, who says that the exclusion of Moshe's name from this week's parsha relates back to Moshe's encounter with Hashem by the “burning bush.” After abjectly refusing to accept the position of “Redeemer” and leader of the Jewish people, “The wrath of Hashem burned against Moshe and He said, ‘Is there not Aharon your brother, the Levi? I know that he will surely speak’” (Shemos 4:14). Rabbi Sacks writes: “There is a debate in the Talmud about the lasting impact of that moment when Moshe, as it were, refused one time too many. To turn down the challenge of leadership once or twice is a sign of humility. To continue to do so, especially when it is G-d issuing the challenge, may bring about G-d's anger, as happened here. According to Rabbi Shimon bar Yochai in the Talmud, the lasting effect of Moshe's reluctance to lead was that one vital leadership role – priesthood – was eventually granted to Aharon rather than to Moshe himself. Rabbi Jacob ben Asher (1270-1340) suggests that Moshe's name is missing from Tetzaveh, which deals with the priestly garments, ‘to spare him distress’ upon seeing Aharon acquire the uniform of priesthood that might have been Moshe's own.”

Alternatively, the Vilna Gaon notes that the yahrzeit of Moshe, 7 Adar, traditionally falls out during the week of Parshas Tetzaveh. The removal of Moshe's name from the parsha alludes to the idea that it was at this time that Moshe was “taken away” from the Jewish people. The Oznyaim L'Torah contrasts this with the non-Jewish approach of establishing a holiday to commemorate the birth or death of a leader or famous person. We, on the other hand, recognize that as great as Moshe Rabbeinu was, he was still a human being, and his humility was unparalleled. So much so, that neither the date of his birth or death, which happen to be the same day, is mentioned in the Torah; nor during the week of his death, does his name even appear once in the parsha. May we all be zoche to walk in the footsteps of Moshe Rabbeinu, to keep our ego in check and humble ourselves before man and before G-d. A gutten Shabbos.

From this Week's Daf

"Rav Huna said that Rav said that Rabbi Meir said; and so it was taught in a Baraisa in the name of Rabbi Akiva: One must always accustom oneself to say: Everything that God does, He does for the best. The Gemara relates: Like this incident, when Rabbi Akiva was walking along the road and came to a certain city, he inquired about lodging, and they did not give him any. He said: Everything that God does, He does for the best. He went and slept in a field, and he had with him a rooster, a donkey and a candle. A gust of wind came and extinguished the candle; a cat came and ate the rooster; and a lion came and ate the donkey. He said: Everything that God does, He does for the best. That night, an army came and took the city into captivity." It turned out that Rabbi Akiva alone, who was not in the city and had no lit candle, noisy rooster or donkey to give away his location, was saved. (Berachos 60b).

Coming Up

- April 25: Bar mitzvah for Moshe Meir Jussim. Kiddush following davening sponsored by his parents, Tova and Rod Jussim.
