Weekly Parsha*Parshas Lech Lecha

By A. Leib Scheinbaum

“Then there came the fugitive and told Avram” (14:13)

Sometimes it takes a powerful example to drive home an idea. Let me explain. Chazal relate the identity of this fugitive. It was none other than Og, king of Bashan, who had survived the flood. In the simple meaning of the pasuk, he is called the fugitive because he had just escaped the battlefield. Chazal add that Og’s motives were less than honorable. In fact, they were iniquitous. He had hoped to incite Avraham Avinu to leave the safety of his home and enter into the fray of battle. Anticipating that the Patriarch would be killed and his widow would become available to him, Og put on an air of righteousness, but it was all a sham. Hashem gave Og his due: the reward of longevity for informing Avraham; and death at the hands of the Jewish people in response to his serpentine motives.

Horav Sholom Schwadron, zl, puts this incident into perspective. Imagine seeing a person walking down the street that leads to shul, bedecked in his Tallis and Tefillin and carrying his Korban Mincha Siddur. People in a group of Jews, noticing this sight, remark “There goes so and so. Do you know where he is going? He is on his way to murder someone or commit an act of adultery. This would clearly seem preposterous, given the image of the person wearing his religious garb and walking to shul. Yet, this is what occurred with Og. Here is a man, a survivor from the battlefield, who comes running, screaming, “Help! Help! They are going to kill your nephew, Lot. Come quickly before it is too late!” He appears honorable, but so does the man who is supposedly going to shul to pray, when, in fact, he is on his way to commit a heinous act of perversion

Rav Sholom cites his rebbe, Rav Leib Chasman, zl, who would explain this anomaly with the following pasuk in Iyov (11:12), “Let one who is (like) a wild donkey be reborn as a man!” This means that one should grab the opportunity to repent while he can. The pasuk is teaching us that when man is born, he is potentially like a wild donkey. If left undisciplined and unrestrained, he will grow up a wild donkey. There is nothing to hold him back. The pera adam, wild man, can be stopped with the nishmas chaim, soul of life, with which Hashem has imbued him. If he studies Torah and works on himself, he can turn around his potentially base character. If he does not, he will simply continue into adulthood with this wild, intemperate nature.

Rav Leib would continue, “I ask you, do you think Og studied mussar, ethics and character refinement? Surely, not. Thus, when we see someone who is uncouth running down the street, regardless of how he presents himself to us, we can safely assume that he is about to do the worst. Nothing is beyond one who is a pera adam!”

Who Was Hagar?

Parshas Lech Lecha tells the story of Avraham Avinu and Sarah Imeinu, the first Patriarch and Matriarch of klal Yisroel. After Avraham is commanded to לך לך, to “Go for yourself from your land, from your relatives, and from your father’s house to the land that I will show you” (Bereishis 12:1), “There was a famine in the land, and Avram descended to Mitzraim to sojourn there” (ibid. 12:10). According to Avos d’Rabbi Nosson (33), these were the first two trials with which Hashem tested Avraham, as it is written in Pirkei Avos: “Our forefather Avraham was tested with ten trials [by the Holy One] and he withstood all of them – to show the degree of Avraham’s love for G-d” (Avos 5:4).

It is interesting to note the Torah’s use of the word ירד in “Avram descended to Mitzraim.” The simple meaning of this pasuk is that Avraham mamash journeyed down to Mitzraim with Sarah and Lot. But a closer look at the following three pasukim might suggest that this use of the word ירד could also allude to a slight descent on a spiritual level, as the Torah states: “And... as he was about to enter Mitzraim, he said to his wife Sarai... ‘you are a woman of beautiful appearance... when the Mitzrim will see you... they will kill me, but you they will let live. Please say that you are my sister, that it may go well with me for your sake... that I may live on account of you’” (ibid. 12:11-13).

The Abaranel states that because of Sarah’s great beauty, this test was especially difficult. Since the Mitzrim were notorious for their immorality, Avraham and Sarah would now be in grave danger if they entered Mitzraim as husband and wife. Avraham sensed that the Mitzrim would surely lust after Sarah and kill him, so he concocted the claim that she was his sister. In order to survive Mitzraim, Avraham had to “spiritually descend” to their level and practice deception. We find the same sort of “spiritual descent” in the case of Yaakov Avinu, who also had to practice deception in order to stay one step ahead of Esav and Lavan, to ensure his own survival. However, the honesty of the Patriarchs makes it impossible to believe that Avraham told an outright lie, which is why Chazal wonder: was she then his sister? She really was his niece! They explain that a man often refers to his relative as his sister (Midrash HaGadol). Though Avraham thought that this ruse would protect Sarah as well as himself, the Ramban comments that it was a “great sin” for him to put her in danger (Artscroll Stone Chumash).

And indeed, in the very next pasuk, “... the Mitzrim saw that the woman was very beautiful... they lauded her for Paroah, and the woman was taken to Paroah’s house” (Bereishis 12:15). But things did not go so well for Paroah. The Midrash (Bereishis Rabbah 41:2) states that Sarah cried out to Hashem, and He sent a malach to smite Paroah and his entire household with boils. [Alternatively, it was a form of tzara’as which struck not only Paroah, but also the walls of his house and his implements (Rashi on Tanchuma 5).] Paroah had no choice but to return Sarah to Avraham, and along with a few more parting gifts, the Midrash (ibid. 45:4) states that he commanded his own daughter Hagar (according to Rabbi Shimon bar Yochai) to become Avraham and Sarah’s maidservant. When he saw the deeds on behalf of Sarah in his house, he took his daughter and gave her to him, saying, “Better that my daughter be a maidservant in this house than a mistress in another house.”

Chapter 16 tells the parsha’s brief story of Hagar and Yishmael. “Now Sarai... had borne him no children. She had a Mitzri maidservant whose name was Hagar... and gave her to Avram, her husband, to him as a wife” (Bereishis 16:1-3). But things did not go so well for Hagar either. The Torah states that Hagar conceived and “her mistress [Sarah] was lowered in her esteem... And Sarai dealt harshly with her, so she [Hagar] fled from her” (ibid. 16:4-6). What happens next gives us an insight as to who Hagar really was. “An angel of Hashem found her [Hagar]... And he said, ‘Hagar, maidservant of Sarai...’ (ibid. 16:7). The next three verses all begin with “And an angel of Hashem said to her,” indicating that in her time of distress, Hagar was visited by four different malachim sent by Hashem to comfort her. By addressing Hagar as maidservant, the first malach reminded her of her subservience to Sarah; the second advised her to return and submit herself to Sarah; the third blessed her for abundant offspring; and the fourth malach informed her of the birth of Yishmael. The Midrash (Bereishis Rabbah 45:7) states that Hagar saw four angels, one after the other, yet she did not tremble with fear, for she was accustomed to seeing angels in the house of Avraham (Rashi).

It seems to me that in the merit of her connection to Avraham and Sarah, Hagar was zoche to Hashem’s compassion. Even when she “stumbled” and fled, Hashem sent her four malachim to help her find her way back to Avraham and Sarah; to fulfill her destiny through Yishmael, and later in life as Keturah (Bereishis 25:1), who Rashi identifies as Hagar: Keturah: this is Hagar, but she is called Keturah because her deeds were as beautiful [pleasant] as incense; and because she did not have relations with any man [keturah is Aramaic for restrained] from the day she separated from Avraham (Rashi). After the death of Sarah, Avraham “remarried” Hagar [Keturah] and fathered six more sons with her (see ibid. 25:1-4), who went “eastward to the land of the east.”

I suppose that it’s true that every parent wants a better life for their children – even Paroah. Although he got duped and was afflicted by a plague, Paroah recognized not only the nobility and grace of Avraham and Sarah, but also their holy connection to G-d that was made so abundantly clear to him while Sarah was in his possession. This was the life he wanted for his daughter. Hagar gave up her status as a princess to become a servant of Avraham and Sarah, and ultimately, a servant of Hashem. Little did Paroah know that from Avraham and his daughter would come Yishmael and the twelve “chieftains of nations” that descended from him, as well as the nations that descended from the sons of Keturah. A gutten Shabbos.

From this Week’s Daf

“R’ Zeira said in the name of Shmuel: We may make eruvei chatzeiros with rice bread and millet bread. Mar Ukva said: It was explained differently to me by the master, Shmuel: We may make an eruv with rice bread, but we may not make an eruv with millet bread. Rav Chiya bar Avin said in the name of Rav: We may make an eruv with lentil bread. The Gemara asks: Is that so? But that type of lentil bread was made in the years of the master, Shmuel, and he threw it to his dog and [the dog] did not eat it. Such an unappetizing bread certainly should not be valid for use for an eruv.” - ? - (Eruvin 81a).
