- 7:00 pm: Kol HaNaarim Learning!

Thank You Elka, Welcome Chana

After serving wholeheartedly for many years in the TY Sisterhood presidium, Elka Rottman has stepped down from her responsibilities. We wish to extend our great appreciation and thanks to Elka for all of her efforts on behalf of the Sisterhood for so many years. Elka's behind-the-scenes dedication to the Sisterhood provided the engine to move things along, and while we will miss her involvement, we are glad to know that she will now be able to take it easy and participate in events as a spectator! We wish to extend an official "warm welcome" to our new presidium member, Chana Birnbaum, and wish Chana and the Sisterhood much hatzlacha as we look forward to the time when we are able to be together again, in sisterhood and in person.

Weekly ParshaParshas Vayechi

By Rabbi A. Leib Scheinbaum

“A charming son is Yosef, a charming son to the eye” (49:22)

The Talmud Berachos 20a teaches that Yosef HaTzaddik and his descendants were impervious to the nefarious power of the evil eye. They derive from the above pasuk that the evil eye had no power over them, because Yosef refused to feed himself from anything that was not his. The evil eye is the product of envy, which results from an individual's character deficiency. He is jealous of others, because he is insecure with himself. Why should a decent person suffer because an individual with a jaundiced character is jealous of his success?

In his Michtav MeiEliyahu 4, Horav Eliyahu Eliezer Dessler, zl, explains that, unless a person is a nosein, has a giving nature, people will be jealous of his success. Therefore, the reason for the envy is the subject's lack of giving. People are envious of “takers” who succeed; they have no issue with one who is a “giver.” In fact, they wish him well!

Rav Dessler supports this with the Talmud's exegesis concerning the pasuk, V'yidgu lerov b'kerev ha'aretz, “And let them multiply like fish in the midst of the earth” (Bereishis 48:16). “As fish in the sea are covered by water and the evil eye has no power over them, so the evil eye has no power over Yosef.” Fish are unique in two ways: they are covered by the water - thus not seen. They live in the water, thus having no interaction with the inhabitants of the land. When one lives alone and does not pierce the eyes of those around him, he does not incur jealousy. “Keep to yourself and no one will bother you,” is a simple and beneficial maxim by which to live. Furthermore, when one lives by himself, he demonstrates that he is secure in his own skin and does not require public adoration to keep him going. When one's ego is not based upon the whims of others, he will not be susceptible to their evil eye. He rises above them.

The Good Life

Vayechi, the last parsha in Sefer Bereishis, describes the final days of the extraordinary life of our patriarch, Yaakov Avinu. As I have written in previous years, the word ויחי, “and he lived,” has a gematria of thirty-four, alluding to the thirty-four years that Yaakov experienced the “good life,” the years he spent with his beloved son Yosef. At the age of seventeen, Yosef was sold into slavery and taken down to Mitzraim; after twenty-two years of separation, Yaakov was finally reunited with Yosef, and spent the last seventeen years of his life with him living in Goshen. These two seventeen-year periods add up to thirty-four; thus, ויחי, “and he [Yaakov] lived” thirty-four years.

The Malbim brings down a concept that the end of a person's life is seen as the measure of his entire life; one who lived all his days in pain, but eventually ended up happy and successful, will forget all his travails and consider himself as having lived an entire life of peace and happiness. Indeed, Yaakov lived a life full of anguish, and suffered intensely from the trials of Esav, Lavan, Dinah and Yosef. When asked by Paroah in last week's parsha, “How many are the days of the years of your life?” (Bereishis 47:8), Yaakov answered, “The days of the years of my sojourns have been a hundred and thirty years. Few and bad have been the days of the years of my life” (ibid. 47:9). Rashi notes that Yaakov answers Paroah with the “days of the years” of his sojourns, i.e., the days of his transience, suggesting that all his days he had been a mere transient in foreign lands. True that these “sojourns” were replete with strife, anguish and tribulation, yet Yaakov was somehow able to prevail, and remained a loyal eved Hashem throughout his entire life.

According to the Midrash, however, Yaakov's description to Paroah of the years of his life being “few and bad” displeased Hashem, and He shortened Yaakov's lifespan by thirty-three years, middah-keneged-middah, for the thirty-three words of complaint he had spoken to Paroah. Instead of living to the age of one hundred eighty like his father Yitzchak, Yaakov died at the age of one hundred forty-seven (Daas Zekeinim, 47:8). [Avraham Avinu was also preordained to live to the age of one hundred eighty, but his life was shortened by five years so that he would not live to witness Esav become a murderer and an adulterer (Bereishis Rabbah 63:12)].

The Malbim takes a closer look at the opening pasuk of the parsha: “And Yaakov lived in the land of Mitzraim seventeen years; and the days of Yaakov... were one hundred forty-seven years” (ibid. 47:28), and explains: “For the last seventeen years of his life, Yaakov ‘lived,’ he thrived and flourished, ‘in the land of Mitzraim’ with success, happiness, and blissful reunification with his beloved son Yosef. Therefore, it was as if ‘Yaakov's days,’ i.e., his entire life, were all ‘years of his life,’ i.e., years of happiness, success and satisfaction. The true definition of life [of a human being] can be considered to be only those days during which one served his Creator. In this regard, Yaakov lacked the twenty-two years of his mourning over the loss of Yosef, where, as our Sages tell us, during this time the Divine Inspiration, ruach haKodesh, did not rest upon him. But now, by serving Hashem in joy during these last seventeen years of his life, Yaakov achieved the spiritual perfection that rectified even those years of anguish.”

Even though the Torah describes Yaakov's lifetime as one riddled with anguish and travail, we see that in the end, he lived the “good life.” Although the word ויחי alludes to all thirty-four years that he spent with Yosef as being the “good life,” we may suggest that the Malbim's explanation is also correct; the fact that he spent the last seventeen years of his life with Yosef in Mitzraim in a state of total bliss, it should be considered as if his entire life was a “good life.” We all experience hardships in life, everyday ups and downs, especially during this time of global pandemic. But we should always feel a sense of security that Hashem is with us all the time, and just as He blessed Yaakov with the “good life,” so, too, may He bless us all with a life of happiness, joy and success. And may Hashem continue to protect us as we slowly make our way out of today's Mitzraim. A gutten Shabbos.

Get to Know Your Shul Office

Here is the next in our series of interviews with the people who perform the responsibilities of our shul office so you can get to know them and to find out what they do. If you ever need the shul office, you will know whom to contact!

Interview with Caryn Blum

Lev Echad: Caryn, you are part of the shul's volunteer office. Can you tell us a little bit about yourself?

Caryn: I was born and raised in Baltimore. I attended Bais Yaakov from Kindergarten through 12th grade, spent a year in Israel at Michlalah, and then attended Towson University, graduating with a Bachelor's Degree in Business Management. I met my husband, Ari, while working at the JCC in college, and the rest is history.

LE: How long have you been a part of the shul?

Caryn: We joined the shul after our marriage in 1994, when the shul first opened in its current location.

LE: How about telling the readers about your responsibilities as part of the shul office.

Caryn: Currently, I am the shul bookkeeper (I can't remember exactly how long I have been doing this). I make sure everyone's donations are correctly applied to their accounts, pay the shul's bills, and make sure everything balances.

LE: How much time in a week do you typically spend on shul work?

Caryn: I spend around 2 hours per week working on the shul books.

LE: Just so we know for the future, under what circumstances would someone contact you?

Caryn: Please reach out to me if you feel something is not correct with your shul balance.

LE: What would you say is the hardest part of your job?

Caryn: Without Lenny and Glenna by my side, there would be hard parts to the job. There are busier times of course -- like membership and yom tov seating time, or the annual CauseMatch campaign.

LE: And finally, what is the best part of your job, what gives you the most pleasure?

Caryn: Membership, yom tov seating, and CauseMatch are very vital to the shul's financial health and worth each minute. I am happy to donate my hours to help keep TY financially sound.

LE: Caryn, thank you for taking the time to talk to us. If you need to get in touch with Caryn, you can contact her at: bookkeeper@tiferesysroel.org. Caryn, and all the shul office volunteers can be found on the shul website under Contact Us.

From this Week's Daf

"Ravina found Rav Acha ben Rava going in search of merisa to use as maror. He said to him: What is in your mind that you seek to fulfill the mitzvah of maror with merisa specifically? Do you prefer them because they are very bitter, and you believe that they are therefore preferred for the mitzvah? But in the Mishnah we have learned *chazeres first in the list of acceptable vegetables, which implies that it is the preferred vegetable with which to fulfill the mitzvah. And the Baraisa taught by the academy of Shmuel also listed chazeres first. And R' Oshaya said as well: The optimal mitzvah is with chazeres. And Rava said: What is chazeres? Chasa (lettuce). And why is it called chasa? For the Merciful One took pity (chas) upon us and saved us from the Mitzrim." (Pesachim 39a).
