Congregation Tiferes Yisroel is saddened to learn of the passing of Mr. David Ference a"h, father of our dear friend and shul member, Scott Ference, and grandfather of our dear friend and shul member, Yosef Ference. Scott will be sitting shiva from Motzai Shabbos until Thursday morning. Scott can be reached by telephone at 443-604-7401. May Scott and Yosef, and the entire Ference family be comforted along with the mourners of Tzion and Yerushalayim.

New Protocols for Women for Shabbos Registration

Unfortunately, due to the limited number of seats in the ezras nashim, there is often an overflow of women in shul, beyond the number we can properly and safely accommodate with our COVID social distancing protocol. Therefore, we have established a new protocol:

- Anyone who registers for Shabbos davening on any one week, must wait until Friday morning of the following week to see if there are any remaining open seats before registering for the next Shabbos.
- Non-members must always wait until Friday morning to register, to ensure that shul members have the first opportunity to sign up.

- There are 11 total slots on the spreadsheet for women to sign up, corresponding to the 11 seating areas in the ezras nashim. Of those 11 seating areas, two can accommodate two women who live in the same house sitting together, and one can accommodate up to three women who live in the same house sitting together. Those areas have all been set up with extra folding chairs for group seating, when needed.
- Accordingly, if you are signing up for multiple family members, and see that there are already three slots on the spreadsheet with multiple names, you may no longer enter multiple names in the same slot to sit together in shul.

Mazel Tov to

- Dr. Alvin and Yehudis Schamroth in Eretz Yisroel on the engagement of their son, Avi, to Kimmy Samet of New Rochelle. May they be zoche to build a bayis ne'eman b'Yisroel.
- Chaya Segal in Eretz Yisroel on her engagement to Usher Bistriz. May they be zoche to build a bayis ne'eman b'Yisroel.

The Weekly Parsha

Parshas Tetzaveh

By Rabbi A. Leib Scheinbaum

“You shall make vestments of sanctity for Aharon your brother, for glory/honor and splendor/beauty” (28:2)

Our parsha addresses the preparation of the Kohanim to serve in the Mishkan; their vestments; the initiation process they would have to undergo prior to serving; and the unique sacrifices they were to offer. The artisans that crafted the vestments of the Kohanim were commanded to prepare garments that would lend both honor and beauty to its wearers. Indeed, honor and beauty seem to be extremely valued ingredients as far as the Divine service is concerned. One wonders about this. It is almost incongruous with the spirit of the Torah. The duality of honor and glory are qualities which can, and often do, catalyze one's downfall. Does the Tanna in Pirkei Avos 4:21 not declare, “Jealousy, desire and honor, remove a person from the world”? Torah achievement requires humility. One who thinks of his own significance leaves no room for the Torah. Indeed, when the Torah lauds Moshe Rabbeinu - Klal Yisrael's quintessential leader - the one through whom Hashem gave the Torah, the individual whose wisdom was beyond our ken to describe, it focuses on his humility. He is praised not for all of his other remarkable qualities, but, rather, for his humility. “And the man, Moshe, was exceedingly humble among all other men on the face of the earth” (Bamidbar 12:3).

Beauty is also a quality which seems alien to Torah. After all, Torah concerns itself with content, while beauty venerates form. Torah focuses on the penimius, internal, essence of a subject, while beauty is external. This does not preclude the positive significance of form or external beauty, but it clearly is not a priority with regard to Jewish values.

Horav Aharon Soloveitchik, zl, explains that by emphasizing that the Priestly vestments feature the two qualities of honor and beauty, the Torah is teaching us that they do, in fact, have a place in our lives. It all depends on their source and how they are used. Honor is a destructive force if its source is selfishness, if it prevents one from giving honor and recognition to others. On the other hand, honor which is derived because one is created in Hashem's image is not only good - it is vital. Indeed, a life replete in dignity is dependent upon the principle that we are all created in the image of G-d. This form of honor engenders self-esteem. When a person has self-respect, dignity and pride, he responds to others in the same manner. Mutual respect is the mortar that keeps relationships going. This is especially true among husband and wife and extremely important in the parent-child relationship.

Beauty plays an equally significant role in Jewish life. The Bais Hamikdash was an edifice in which beauty was manifest in its every aspect and detail. The Torah was well aware that eye appeal has a dominant role in generating heart appeal. In addition, as the Gaon, zl, m'Vilna notes, the Torah sees fit to relate that the Imahos were physically attractive. When Shlomo Hamelech writes in Sefer Mishlei (31:30) that hevel ha'yofî, “beauty is vain,” he is referring to beauty devoid of morality, something which contemporary society has blatantly ignored.

The Torah's attitude toward beauty is expressed in the Shirah (Shemos 15:2): Zeh keili v'anveihu, “This is my G-d and I will beautify Him.” Chazal have broken the word v'anveihu in two and derived ani v'Hu, I and He. This means that we are enjoined to emulate Hashem; just as He is merciful and compassionate, so must I be likewise merciful and compassionate. Real beauty is comprised of following in Hashem's ways and, thus, goes hand in hand with sanctity.

The Bigdei Kehunah incorporated both honor and beauty. They inspired both their wearer and their spectator with a harmonious blend of honor and beauty, representing the intrinsic and extrinsic values integral toward a life of sanctity, a life dedicated to the spirit.

Up in Smoke

The last chapter in Parshas Tetzaveh discusses the construction of the Golden Mizbe'ach (Altar) to be used for burning incense by Aharon HaKohen: “You shall make a Mizbe'ach on which to bring incense up in smoke” (Shemos 30:1). It is a fair question to ask why this command appears at the end of Tetzaveh, when the commands to construct all the other sacred vessels of the Mishkan appear four chapters earlier in Parshas Terumah. Rabbi Noach Weinberg answers this kasha: “The burning of the incense represents the highest level of service to Hashem; it is the pinnacle that can only come after all else is in position.” The Abarbanel states that the burning of the ketores was the most spiritual and holy of all the services performed in the Mishkan. Reb Noach points out that the Torah refers to the Golden Mizbe'ach as “holy of holies to Hashem” (ibid. 30:10), whereas the Copper Mizbe'ach described in Terumah is referred to only as “holy of holies” (ibid.

29:37), thereby giving it a higher level of sanctity.

The Midrash identifies the sense of smell as being the only sense that was unaffected by Adam's sin of the Etz HaDaas. The Gemara states: “Rav Zutra bar Toviyah said in the name of Rav: From where is it derived that we recite a blessing over a fragrance? As it is stated: ‘Let every soul praise G-d.’ What is something from which the soul derives pleasure but the body does not? You must say that this is the pleasure of smell” (Berachos 43b). From this Gemara we see that smell is the sense of the soul! The Maharsha explains that smell is more spiritual than our other senses since it was through Adam's nose that Hashem invested mankind with a soul, as the Torah states: “And Hashem G-d formed the man... and He blew into his nostrils the soul of life; and man became a living being” (Bereishis 2:7).

Reb Noach continues: “The incense, that sublime spiritual offering, represents transcending one's physical limitations and sense of self. Burning the incense is the ultimate sacrifice because it represents giving up the most important, but least tangible, part of who we are; namely, our ego. It symbolizes transcending our subjective view of what is important [according to the body] and channeling this drive toward doing Hashem's will [the desire of the soul]. Just as the incense becomes intermingled with the surrounding air, we, too, can become one with the Almighty by transcending our artificial sense of meaning and importance, and embracing Hashem's meaning and purpose.” This suppression of the ego can best be achieved through humility.

As most of you know, I have a bumper sticker on my car that says, “We are not human beings having a spiritual experience. We are spiritual beings having a human experience.” The Chovos Halevavos teaches that the essence of humility is to live with the realization that you are a soul, not a body. The yetzer hara fools us by getting us to identify with the animalistic side that we all possess, which is dominated by our ego and the need to satisfy our physical desires. However, as Reb Noach puts it, when we live with the awareness that we are a lofty soul that yearns for meaning and connection to the Almighty, we gain the clarity to make the proper choices that create a deeply fulfilling life. He writes: “The battle for life is the battle for sanity. When we follow the dictates of the body, we hurt ourselves and create a hollowed-out existence of degradation and shame. When we live as a soul, we tap into the power of genuine meaning and pleasure. Our soul is eternal, and the spiritual growth it attains in this world will last forever.”

Just as the ketores offering had the power to reach the highest levels of spiritual heights, the path of humility enables us to connect to the soul's yearning for ultimate meaning. This is why we include the smelling of spices each metzei Shabbos when we make Havdalah. The בשמים we smell helps to assuage oneself for the loss of the departing neshama yesirah, the additional "Shabbos soul" that comes down to enhance our Shabbos (Abudraham). Again, we see here the connection between the incense and the soul. May we all be zoche to recognize that we are "spiritual beings having a human experience," and cause our physical desires to go "up in smoke." A gutten Shabbos.

From this Week's Daf

"And in this regard, they follow their own view elsewhere, for it was taught in a Baraisa: A convert to Judaism who converted between the two Pesach offerings, or a minor who reached maturity between the two Pesach offerings, is obligated to offer the second Pesach; these are the words of Rebbi. R' Nassan says: Whoever requires the first Pesach requires the second; but whoever does not require the first Pesach does not require the second Pesach. In what point do they differ? Rebbi maintains that the second Pesach is a festival in its own right, and carries its own Pesach obligation. R' Nassan maintains that the second Pesach substitutes for the first Pesach. And R' Chananya ben Akavya holds that the second Pesach makes up for the failure to offer the first Pesach." (Pesachim 93a).
