Weekly Parsha*Parshas Ha'azinu Sukkos/Koheles

By Rabbi A. Leib Scheinbaum

“He was like an eagle arousing its nest, hovering over its young, spreading its wings and taking them, carrying them on its pinions” (32:11)

In describing Hashem's relationship with Klal Yisrael, the Torah uses the simile of an eagle. The eagle demonstrates incredible compassion for its young. It does not suddenly enter its nest, but rather, stirs the nest up, then spreads its wings - not under, but - above its nestlings, so that, with keen courageous eyes, they fly up to rest on the mother's outspread wings awaiting them above. The eaglets, however, must make the first move, explains Horav S. R. Hirsch, zl. Their mother waits for them, but they must bravely and consciously make the decision to leave the safety and security of their nest and fly up by themselves to set themselves upon their mother's outstretched wings.

So, too, does Hashem first awake His People and get them used to having the courage to trust themselves with the free-willed decision and full consciousness to place themselves under His guidance. This free-willed, conscious decision is the preliminary condition that grants them access to the whole future guidance and makes them worthy of it. Only the young eagle has the courage to leave the stability of its nest and trust himself to the upward flight, into the isolating heights where its parent hovers.

It requires great courage to make this move, to take the “plunge” and trust in a Higher Power. We are so used to relying on the secure and comfortable life built upon human power and art that it is difficult to sacrifice a life of materialism and imagined security for a life of spirituality, relying solely on the word of G-d. How many have refused to do so out of fear of the “unknown”? How many have “tip toed” out, only to return quickly, having failed the courage test? To be an observant Jew takes courage and resolution. Klal Yisrael was trained during the forty-year sojourn in the wilderness. This courage to trust has been transmitted to their descendants. We have to believe in ourselves, believe that we can do it. Unless we make the move by leaving the imagined safety of the nest, however, we will never soar. We will continue living in the nest until it falls apart and we, who thought that we have been protected, will sadly discover that we are not. Hashem beckons to us to come to Him, but we must be prepared to leave the nest.

A Short Vort

It is brought down that each of the Four Species corresponds to a different part of the human body. The אֶרֶב represents the human heart. There are four things that we daven for from our hearts that Hashem should grant us in a complete (shalaimah) way. They are emunah shalaimah, teshuvah shalaimah, refuah shalaimah and geulah shalaimah. Using the roshei teivos of each word – aleph (emunah), tav (teshuvah), reish (refuah) and gimmel (geulah), it spells אֶרֶב!

Beneath the Sun

Perhaps one of the most cryptic writings in all of Tanach is Koheles, Shlomo HaMelech's opus depicting the futility of the human experience. “Futility of futilities! -- said Koheles -- Futility of futilities! All is futile! What profit does man have for all his labor which he toils beneath the sun?” (Koheles 1:2-4). What is Shlomo HaMelech trying to convey with this seemingly hopeless and cynical perspective on the human experience? For years I have tried to answer this question and gain meaning and perspective from Koheles, and I believe that I finally may be able to offer some insight.

As many of you know, I have a bumper sticker on my car that reads: “We are not human beings having a spiritual experience, we are spiritual beings having a human experience.” I believe that this is the message of Koheles - that Shlomo HaMelech is reminding us that although our experience as human beings is deeply rooted in physicality, our true being is of a spiritual nature, and our endeavors in life should be geared toward spiritual growth. The “futility” of our lives that he describes only refers to our human activities that are of a purely physical nature - the things we do every day to satisfy our physical needs and desires. The key phrase in Koheles is “beneath the sun,” which seems to be a metaphor for the physical world and material life as we know it. This theme is repeated throughout the entire Megillah, as it says, “Whatever has been is what will be, and whatever has been done is what will be done. There is nothing new beneath the sun!” (ibid. 1:9). This suggests that while our lives are futile in “mundane” physical terms, our “holy” spiritual possibilities are unlimited.

The Torah begins with “In the beginning of G-d's creating the heavens and the earth” (Bereishis 1:1), defining the spiritual and the physical realms of creation. The Maharal explains that adama, “earth,” has two very seemingly different characteristics, which in reality harmonize with one another. On the one hand, there is little intrinsic value in a simple clod of earth; on the other hand, that simple clod of earth provides minerals and nutrients to the planted seed, allowing it to sprout and flourish into a plant. All life ultimately comes from the earth, and is reliant on the earth's properties to thrive and survive. We live on the earth; it provides food and minerals for sustenance, and carries within it the entire and total potential of human life. In an essay written by Yaakov Astor, he says, “Adama, then, is that material which in and of itself is valueless, but which nevertheless carries within itself a vast potential. Adam (mankind) is called his name because he has the potential of adama. He is nothing as he is; he is everything in what he can become.”

I believe that this is the message of Koheles. Shlomo HaMelech is teaching us that for all our labors and toils, our physical endeavors “beneath the sun,” we gain nothing - it is futile. There is no ultimate benefit to our activities “beneath the sun,” because we are limited by physicality. However, labor and activities “above the sun,” those of a spiritual nature for the pursuit of spiritual growth, are the true purpose of our existence. Koheles is encouraging us to engage in these spiritual pursuits by showing us that life lived purely for the “human” physical experience is empty and vain - a “futility of futilities.” However, when we pursue a spiritual existence “above the sun,” focusing on spiritual growth and character refinement, we human beings have the potential to become G-dly, and then we will be able to “Fear G-d and keep His commandments, for that is man's whole duty” (ibid. 12:14).

The Ramban states that the book of Koheles has three main themes: “1 - Man should not strive after the pleasures of this world because, for all their allurements, they are fleeting and without value. 2 - Man's spiritual essence is eternal and he has a vital role in G-d's master plan. 3 - Human intelligence simply cannot comprehend G-d's ways or assimilate all the situations and calculations upon which His justice is based.” Seen this way, Koheles deepens our enjoyment of the festival of Sukkos because it helps us focus on what our goals in life should be. And, as in many areas, a clear knowledge of one's goal is half the job of getting there (Artsroll Stone Chumash).

Koheles is nothing more than a reality-check, and rather than being perceived as “hopeless and cynical,” it should inspire us to try to maximize our potential in this life, and enjoy being "spiritual beings having a human experience." No doubt that it takes much hard work and commitment to achieve this level of spiritual greatness, but Hashem has given us a lifetime to try to achieve it. Rabbi Tarfon said, "You are not required to complete the task, yet you are not free to withdraw from it." (Avos 2:14). May we all be zoche to gain inspiration from Koheles and continue down the path to spiritual greatness. A gutten Shabbos and Chag Samayach!

Parsha Poem

Could it be that this song sung by Moshe Rabbeinu,
Is the vision withheld from Yaakov Avinu?
Past, present, and future in a shir with no rhyme,
And revealed here at last at a more favorable time?
In the ears of a people from servitude saved,
Instead of 12 brothers bound to be slaves?
And what other nation shown the future this way,
Would be stiff-necked enough to choose life anyway?

From This Week's Daf

"For a teacher of Baraisos taught the following Baraisa before R' Yochanan: If a person cooks a gid hanasheh with milk on Yom Tov and eats it, he incurs the following five penalties of lashes. He incurs the penalty of lashes for cooking the gid hanasheh on Yom Yov unnecessarily, and he incurs another penalty of lashes eating the gid hanasheh, and he incurs the penalty of lashes for cooking meat in milk, and he incurs the penalty of lashes for eating meat and milk that were cooked together, and he incurs the penalty of lashes for kindling a fire on Yom Tov unnecessarily." No Peanuts! The shul is peanut-free. In consideration of our members with peanut allergies, please refrain from bringing peanut products into the shul.

Fragrances. In consideration of our members and guests who are allergic to fragrances, or who are sensitive enough that they are unable to daven, we ask that you wear your fragrances and hairspray aslightly as possible so that other people are not aware of it.

Joblink. Joblink provides job seekers, recruiters and employers with valuable information regarding employment opportunities and career information.

If you are looking for a job or know of one at your office, please contact our shul liaison, David Sawilowsky at 804-350-2117, or Marthe Vidaver at Joblink at marthe@joblink employment.com or 410-602-8700.

Mitzvah Cards. For $18, you get four cards that you can mail out yourself. For $10, we will send the card out for you, and your donation will be announced in the Lev Echad.

To purchase mitzvah cards please contact Glenna Ross at mitzvahcards@tiferesyisroel.org.

Ride G'mach. Call the Ride G'mach at 410-358-7433. We need ride offers when anyone drives interstate, any direction. There are high school students who live in Lakewood and in Brooklyn who learn in Baltimore schools and vice versa. Please help them get home for Shabbos. Not door-to-door, just city-to-city. Often, Chesed of Boro Park calls, needing a ride to/from New York for people with medical appointments in a Baltimore hospital.

Shul Rentals. To reserve the use of the shul's Simcha Hall or Nancy Taffel Annex, please contact Eileen Rosenbaum at 410-764-8443 or facilityrental@tiferesyisroel.org.
