YOUR SUPPORT IS NEEDED

“Take heed for yourself that you do not forsake the Levi as long as you live upon your land.” (Debarim 12:19)

As B'nei Yisrael are about to undertake the settlement of the land, it is significant to note that the tribe of Levi will be scattered among the people. The Leviim will act as the nerves and arteries emanating from the nation's brain and heart, with the Mishkan maintaining the spiritual link and bond between the members of the nation.

Scattered among a population engaged primarily in agricultural pursuits, cattle breeding, and other related industries, such “unproductive” members of the community as the Levim, could easily become neglected and even despised, if the people fail to appreciate the vital role of the Leviim in the spiritual and moral welfare of the nation. Therefore, the Torah reiterated the admonishment against neglecting the Levi “all your days upon your soil.” From this we learn that the length of time that we are permitted to dwell upon the land depends upon the respect and reverence accorded to the Leviim, and their influence and dominance on our own moral and spiritual development. (Peninim on the Torah)

“If your brother tries to incite you in secret saying, ‘Let us go worship strange gods,’ you shall surely kill him” (Debarim 13:7-10)

One who attempts to lead Jews astray and worship idols is considered a dangerous threat. He is punished with stoning, which is the most severe form of capital punishment. Rabenu Bahya explains that all the commands of the Torah are completely merciful. If the Torah commands us to kill him it cannot be out of revenge or retribution, but it must be because we have mercy on the rest of the people so they shouldn't fall prey to him. If we would execute him with revenge it would influence us and turn us into cruel people.

How much cruelty could there be in this act of stoning an idolatrous missionary? He was trying to convert innocent Jews, and destroy their souls in the World to Come, a crime worse than murder. Even if we can pinpoint some iota of cruelty, how can this “accustom” one to develop a cruel nature? A court didn't execute more than once in seventy years. So this event can probably happen once in a lifetime. Is there a danger of a one time event habituating a person to cruelty?

Rabbi A. Henach Leibowitz learns from this an important lesson. We see how incredibly delicate and sensitive is the human psyche! Even a sincere righteous Jew in the rare act of meting out the Torah-prescribed penalty for such a heinous crime — with the sole intention of punishing the wrongdoer and without any feelings of malice — would be affected on some level and may develop a cruel nature. On the other hand, if the executioner's intention was to save the Jewish nation from further corruption, there will be no negative impact upon his soul. Every event has an impact, and even the smallest influence pushes us in a certain direction.

When we punish our children or students we are hopefully considering the effect it will have on the child. But are we aware of how it might affect us? We must have the proper motivations of compassion and mercy, and the desire to help our children and students grow and avoid mistakes. This way we can help them and ourselves be true servants of Hashem.

Shabbat Shalom.
Rabbi Reuven Semah

“You shall open up your hand to him ... and provide whatever is lacking to him” (Debarim 15:8)

In this week's perashah the Torah teaches us how to extend a helping hand to a friend in need. As descendants of Abraham Abinu, the pillar of kindness and hesed, we possess in our genes the love of being generous and caring to others. An important aspect of hesed (doing acts of kindness) is that it is not to be administered in a “one-size-fits-all” manner. In the verse quoted above it says, “And provide what is lacking to him.” The word “him” is emphasized to underline the importance of dealing with each person as the unique individual he is. There are people who believe that to do hesed requires money. However, frequently all a person needs to do hesed is a good pair of ears! By offering a sympathetic ear to a person who is burdened with a problem, one can perform a tremendous hesed.

Rabbi Abraham Pam a”h tells about his mother, Rebbetzin Rachel Leah Pam a”h, who possessed this special quality. In the little village of Salok, Lithuania, where she lived, there was a mentally disturbed woman who was known simply as “Rivka di Meshugena.” She probably suffered a breakdown of some sort and the primitive medical knowledge available was not enough to treat her. She had a very frightening look and everyone stayed away from her. But, Rivka the Meshugena knew there was one place that she would always be welcome — Rebbetzin Pam's kitchen. Rav Pam would recount that he remembered that when she came all of his siblings would flee in panic and hide until she left. As the Rebbetzin did her kitchen chores, she would patiently listen as Rivka unburdened her heavy heart. This would calm Rivka down for a period of time until she came back again for another “session.”

All human beings need someone to listen to them at some time or another, some more often than others. The ability to listen can be a great hesed and at times a lifesaver as well.

Parashat Re'eh is usually read in the summer when we make time for relaxation and recreation. But it is also an opportunity to listen to others. Hashem created human beings with ears. Man's task is to know how to listen.

Shabbat Shalom.
Rabbi Reuven Semah

CLOSE UP

“After Hashem, your G-d, you shall walk” (Debarim 13:5)

The Hafess Hayim asked: The first word in this verse is aharai, which denotes a far distance. Since this verse tells us to follow Hashem, why didn't the Torah use a term denoting closeness, since we should be as close as possible to Him? This teaches us, said the Hafess Hayim, that regardless of how far a person feels he is from Hashem, he should never give up hope. With all of his power he should strive to come closer to Hashem. Therefore, the Torah uses a term which denotes distance. Even those who are far from Hashem should seek Him and will find Him. Never allow any faults or transgressions to prevent you from coming closer to Hashem.

When a person feels discouraged, his belief that he can no longer improve becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy and the truth is that he will not improve. But as soon as you believe that you can improve in any area, you will immediately find the strength to make improvements. If you lack the knowledge of what to do to improve, you will find people you can consult. But this takes motivation and you will only feel motivated if you believe that there is hope for the future. Remember what the Hafess Hayim said about never despairing and keep your focus on what you can do in the present to become closer to Hashem.

ALL IN THE FAMILY

“You are children of Hashem” (Debarim 14:1)

The concept of being considered Hashem's children carries with it powerful consequences. We are promised redemption from the depths of bondage, persecution and the many other trials which have marked the chronicles of our tumultuous past. These special guarantees, however, are accompanied by the responsibilities of being Hashem's children. We are inescapably subject to specific tasks, rigorous standards and formidable punishment.

Attribution as Hashem's children implies a sympathetic and personal loving relationship.

Focus on Tanach

The idea is to complete all of Tanach, as a community, with each family or individual learning a book from Tanach or a Parsha from the Torah. There can be overlap, as long as we finish Tanach as a shul.

As the Bechor Shor emphasizes, even when one suffers excruciating loneliness as a result of the loss of a parent or other close relative, he must realize that he is never truly alone; his Father in Heaven lives eternally with him. A Jew's period of mourning should be mitigated by the knowledge that he is never alone because Hashem is there. The existence of a stable binding relationship with Hashem, characterized by love, has been a vital force throughout our history. Membership in this "family" also carries with it the profound awareness that one retains this relationship from the minute he is born until that time when his soul returns to his "Father" in Heaven.
