The Weekly Parsha

Pinchas

By Rabbi Avraham Yehoshua Greenbaum
(from www.azamra.org)

“And The Land Will Give Its Produce”

Directly after the account of the appointment of Joshua to lead the Children of Israel into the Land, the Torah enters into a lengthy section detailing the sacrifices in the Temple every day, on Shabbat, on the New Moon and on each of the festivals throughout the year. The juxtaposition of the two sections is explained in the commentary of Ramban, (Rabbi Moshe ben Nachman, Nachmanides). "Having said, 'Among these you shall divide up land', G-d completed the exposition of the law of the sacrifices that they should perform in the land."

There is an integral connection between the inheritance of the Land and bringing sacrifices to the Temple every day, every week, every month and on every festival. The Temple is at the very center of the land in all three dimensions of existence: time, space and soul. The souls of the people who inhabit the land must be focused on the Temple both in terms of time and space. In terms of time, they must be focused on the Temple through the services that must be performed at specific junctures in time: in the morning and afternoon (times of the daily sacrifices), on the Sabbath, on the New Moon, and particularly on the three pilgrim festivals, when the whole nation must come up to Jerusalem.

Space is intimately bound up with these very services in the Temple at these various junctures in time. This is because the Temple services are centered on the produce of the Land. Our parshah details the various sacrifices of lambs, oxen, wheat, oil and wine on the Temple Altar daily, on Shabbat, the New Moon and all the Festivals. The regular offering of these token gifts culled from the produce of the Land elevates and brings blessing to all of the fruits of the Land.

Unique among the offerings on the Altar are those on the festival of Succoth ("Tabernacles"). On the first day, the offerings included thirteen oxen, on the second day twelve, and so on. The total number of oxen offered on the seven days of the festival was seventy, corresponding to the seventy nations of the world, for whose blessing and welfare

Israel is also charged with responsibility. It is our prayer that both Israel and the nations will quickly realize that peace and blessing will come only from the Temple services and not from empty peace plans.

On Succoth even the humblest of all has its place on the Altar: water. The Midrash tells us that at the time of creation, the waters cried out to G-d that everyone has a place on the Altar -- oxen, sheep, wheat, barley, oil, wine. All except for water. The waters threatened to engulf the world until G-d promised them that on the festival of Succoth, Israel would offer a libation of humble water on the Altar, accompanied by Simchas Bais HaShoeva "the Joy of the Water Drawing", which was so great that it brought people to prophecy.

The water libation on Succoth is not written explicitly in the Torah but only allusively. Three seemingly minute anomalies in the Hebrew phrasing of the laws of the offerings of the second, sixth and seventh days of the festival of Succoth, enable us to trace the letters of the word Hebrew word mayim -- water -- running through the Hebrew text (see Rashi on Numbers 29:18).

May we constantly drink the waters of the Torah, "and this book of the Torah will not move from your mouth, and you shall meditate in it day and night in order to guard and perform all that is written in it, for then you will have success in your paths and then you will be wise" (Joshua 1:8).

The Shmirah Project

“We are sadly re-starting the Shmira Project, a grassroots program that pairs IDF combat soldiers with Jews around the world who do acts of kindness, prayer or Torah learning to increase the soldier’s spiritual merit and protection.

Israel is once again in conflict and has mobilized 40,000 reserves. The Shmira Project is under the auspices of Rav Simcha HaCohen Kook (The Hurva Synagogue) and Rav Aharon Feldman (Ner Yisroel). Put simply: the Shmira Project matches people with combat soldiers so we can ‘adopt’ one or more soldiers with the intent to do a specific mitzvah in their merit which we hope will help protect them.

Any mitzvah that you do on behalf of a soldier truly makes a difference – to the soldier and to Jewish unity.

Pick a mitzvah that can easily be a part of your life and dedicate it to “your” soldier. Be realistic. Write your soldier’s name out and post it where you’ll see it: near the Shabbat candles; on the refrigerator; in your car; in your phone. Then, when you are going to do something positive in the world – stop and think of “your” soldier and include him or her in your mitzvah.

Go to our Comments Page and tell us what you do. We’ve received heartwarming stories from 35 countries sharing how meaningful it’s been to help an Israeli soldier. Read our FAQ page for more information.

The founder of this program is a mother of a former combat soldier and I know that thousands of parents of current IDF soldiers will be grateful with this outpouring of support.

Please tell your friends.”
