The Weekly Parsha

Parsha on Parade

(from <http://www.torahtots.com>)

HASHEM CALLS MOSHE

In our last episode Hashem introduced the laws of bringing korbanot. Our Parsha opens as Hashem finally forgives Aharon for his participation in the Chet HaEgel (sin of the Golden Calf). In the last Parsha, Aharon's name didn't appear even once; Parshat Tzav starts off with a message for Moshe to "command Aharon and his sons." Everything in this Parsha is directed at Kohanim.

GOOD MORNING KORBAN

In the Mishkan, the Kohain starts off his morning with a Korban Olah (also called the Korban Tomid). The Olah sacrifice is a community sacrifice of one lamb. Another lamb is offered in the afternoon.

The kohanim are encouraged to be enthusiastic and swift and to employ great zeal! But before anything is placed on the Mizbayach ...

TERUMAT HADESHEN — "LOTS" OF ASHES

Morning comes to the Mishkan and you can imagine the dash to determine who will do the first mitzvah of the day. The race is on ... or is it? Hashem recommends a lottery system.

Each morning the Kohanim draw lots to determine who will be first to perform the daily rituals. The winner performs the terumat hadeshen (taking a portion of ashes). First he purifies himself in the mikva. Next, he puts on his priestly garments. Then he pours water from the Kiyor (the washing basin), over his hands and feet. Next he takes a silver pan and climbs the ramp of the Mizbayach. From the previous day's ashes he takes a handful and places it into the vessel. Then he takes the pan to the east side of the ramp and pours out the contents in a designated spot. (One of the miracles that occurred in the Bait Hamikdash was that these ashes would be swallowed up into the floor immediately. No trace of them would remain.)

After the first pan of ashes is poured out, it's a "free-for-all" for the rest of these Kohanim as they rush up the ramp and empty the ashes of the Mizbayach.

These ashes are piled in the center of the Mizbayach. This pile is called a Tapuach. It is considered a monument to the large amount of Korbanot that had been offered the day before.

As days go by, the Tapuach gets very large, excess ashes are taken to a place outside of the Mishkan. During the time of the Bait Hamikdash, these ashes were taken by a Kohain wearing old priestly garments, to a special spot outside the walls of Yerushalayim.

KEEPERS OF THE FLAME

The Kohanim are commanded to prepare three stacks of wood on the Mizbayach Ha'Olah, which sits in the outer courtyard of the Mishkan. These piles are called Ma'arachot.

The largest pile, the ma'aracha gedola, is where the korbanot are burned. It is located on the east side of the Mizbayach.

The second pile is in the southwestern corner of the Mizbayach. Its fire is used to light the incense Mizbayach in the Kodesh.

There is a third pile of wood that can be placed anywhere on the Mizbayach.

This third pile of wood is used specifically for the mitzvah of maintaining the fire on the first pile of wood.

Twice a day, in the morning and in the afternoon, when the Korban Olah is offered, two logs are taken from the third pile and thrown into the Ma'aracha Gedola.

Hashem's command to maintain the fire of the Ma'aracha Gedola includes adding logs on Shabbat! That is how important this mitzvah is.

The fire, we're happy to report, was maintained throughout the years in the Midbar (desert) (including traveling time) through the Mishkan's days in Gilgal, Nov and Givon. That's over 100 years!

INTRODUCING ... THREE NEW KORBANOT!

The first time a Kohain comes to serve in the Mishkan, he has to bring a "Korban Chinuch," an initiation Korban. It's made of flour, oil and incense just like a Korban Mincha.

The "Minchat Chavitin" is brought each day by the Kohain Gadol. The deal is that the expense has to come out of his own pocket. It consists of your basic Mincha offering of flour, oil and incense. Half is offered in the morning, and half in the afternoon. The offerings are completely burned.

The third Korban is called the "Shalmay Todah," the thanksgiving peace offerings. This Korban's a must for people who have overcome dangerous situations like illness, a kidnapping, long trips through the desert or across the sea, or prison. In addition to the animal, this korban needs 40 lachmay todah (loaves of thanks), made in a variety of ways. (Thirty loaves of three types of unleavened bread [matzo] and ten loaves of leavened bread [chametz].) After the animal is skinned and cut up, a kohain arranges the pieces of meat one on top of another, with four loaves

(one of each type) on top. The kohain then places his hand underneath the owner's, and performs the tenufa (waving), waving the meat and loaves to and fro, up and down. Parts of the animal went onto the mizbayach, part (breast and thigh) to the kohanim, and the rest to the owner. The challot (loaves) were also divided between the Kohanim and the owner, with most going to the owner, who could share them with his friends.

Today, a survivor of these critical situations, must recite a Birkhat Hagomail, a special blessing of thanks to Hashem.

A FEW MORE DETAILS

Some Korbanot have to be eaten the same day that they are offered. Whatever is left over has to be burned. If someone deliberately eats a Korban after the cut-off time, it is a violation of the commandment! Some Korbanot may be eaten for up to two days.

When you slaughter a Korban, if you have in mind that you are going to eat it after its prescribed time limit or outside its designated area, that Korban is no good, and may not be eaten. The Torah calls that Korban "Piggul" — abominable.

Next Hashem tell us two laws that apply today as well. Certain fat parts of animals (cheilev) must be removed before we are allowed to eat their meat. The procedure called Nikkur (done by a specially trained expert) is used to remove these fatty parts from the animals.

We are also forbidden to eat blood. We must process our kosher meat (and chicken too), to remove the blood before we may eat it.

WRAPPING IT ALL UP

On the 23rd of Adar, Hashem commands Moshe to train Aharon and his sons in how to wear their garments and how to offer the korbanot.

On Hashem's command, Moshe now calls for the entire Bnei Yisroel to assemble in the Mishkan's courtyard to see Aharon and his sons become Kohanim. And all 600,000 men fit into about 100 x 200 feet. (Another one of Hashem's miracles!!) Moshe dresses in a white garment and for seven days he handles the jobs of the Kohain Gadol while Aharon and his sons observe and eagerly learn the Avodah.

Each night of these seven days, Moshe takes apart the Mishkan and each morning he sets it up again.

Stay tuned as Aharon and his sons finally get their first crack at the Avodah on the eighth day of the dedication days.

There's triumph — there's tragedy — in our next episode of Parsha on Parade.
