With the rather rapidly increasing rates of Covid and the uncertainties regarding Omicron, the CSAIR medical committee has suspended Shabbat morning indoor kiddush for now.

Last week's kiddush was safe and joyous, but the rising Covid numbers and local spread has caused much concern and thus we are adding this additional safety precaution. For now, there are no other changes in our other Covid policies including the new regulations for private parties for bnei mitzvah families. We will keep you informed as the situation develops if any other changes to our protocols need to be made.

This week, we will have to-go kiddush bags that people can take as they leave services on Shabbat with donuts celebrating the first birthday of Vivian Tannor-Weiss the daughter of new members Dena Weiss and Shlomo Tannor. We look forward to continuing to celebrate simhas together as a community.

Thank you for your continued care for each other to create a safe, healthy and loving community.

Shabbat shalom,

Rabbi Katz
