A Message from Rabbi Fasman

Rabbi Mark Fasman

Rabbi@kolrinahstl.org

Tell me a fact and I'll learn. Tell me a truth and I'll believe. But tell me a story and it will live in my heart forever.

- Native American proverb

"Great stories teach you something. That's one reason I haven't slipped into some sort of retirement: I always feel like I'm learning something new."

- Clint Eastwood.

"God made man because he loves stories."

- Elie Wiesel

Stories are powerful vehicles for conveying culture and values and ethics. Multiple layers of meaning are often transmitted from teller to listener without either being aware of them. For example, everyone seems to know the Goldilocks story. But most haven't thought about the lessons concealed within the tale. Over the years, I have asked hundreds of b'nei mitzvah students what the "moral" of the story is. Most say, "You shouldn't go into other people's homes." So why don't parents just say to their children, "Don't go into other people's houses. Good night"? Stories may not give "direct messages," but the messages are more powerfully and deeply transmitted through the telling. And, just as important, there are many more lessons to be learned in most stories.

For example, the Goldilocks story is also teaching Maimonides' golden rule: "Moderation is a good thing." (Not too hot, not too cold, just right....) One student said, "You should never settle for the first thing you try." True! Another said, "You shouldn't be so picky." Also true, even though it directly contradicts the previous message! One brilliant insight was, "There is always something right for each person in the family, and it is different for each person." All of these messages, and many more, have been transmitted from generation to generation.

At Selichot, Dr. Howard Schwartz presented a wonderful program on "Tales of the Great Jewish Mystics." On the weekend of November 22-23, Dr. Schwartz will be presenting two additional programs on Jewish stories.

For four Tuesday nights in October, I will be teaching a class on Jewish approaches to interpreting Jewish texts. The Rabbis approached the multiple layers of meaning through the acronym PaRDeS – P'shat, Remez, Derash, and Sod. The p'shat is the surface meaning of the text – what we learn from the words themselves. Remez means "hint" – it refers to the allegorical and metaphorical meaning of the text. It is on this level that the Rabbis apply gematria (converting the Hebrew letters into their numerical equivalent) in order to suggest a secondary meaning.

The third level of interpretation is derash – "investigation." This is the level of homiletics – sermons and divrei Torah, in which an underlying moral or value is learned. For example, the story of Miriam's leprosy becomes the basis of our laws concerning lashon ha-ra, "evil speech."

The fourth, and lowest, level is sod – "secret." This is Jewish mysticism. I don't expect to get this deep.

My plan is, by the end of the course, each member of the class will understand how to craft a d'var Torah – and will prepare one to be delivered at a Shabbat morning service.

At the very least, we will have a better understanding of how Torah speaks to each of us throughout the generations. We will have a deeper appreciation for stories, and for sacred texts in particular. And we will be able to better appreciate Howard Schwartz's talks on November 22 and 23.

Join us if you can. No prerequisites. Just an open and inquisitive mind.

The deadline for submitting an article for this publication is past and I am under pressure to write one. Not having had time to do that because of the increased activity of Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur taking much more time than anticipated, I thought I would offer some suggestions of reading material with content that is relevant to our recent merger and building Kol Rinah. As you read these use their content to consider what the future of Kol Rinah could be.

One of my current favorites that is on my Kindle and I am seriously considering purchasing a hard copy of is, RELATIONAL JUDAISM by Dr. Ron Wolfson. Normally I do not read "help" books but this one is outstanding, and I find myself referring to it frequently. Dr. Wolfson has authored several books that are similar in content.

He has an impressive personal history and is familiar with St. Louis, having earned his B.A. in Religious Studies, M.A., Education, and Ph.D. Education at Washington University. He is most noted for being the co-founder and co-president of Synagogue 3000 (which you should google to learn more about.) This book is the result of his research into many Jewish synagogues and organizations in the U.S. He "presents practical strategies and case studies to transform the old model of Jewish Institutions into relational communities." As you read the book you will recognize the names of many Jewish professionals here in St. Louis working to achieve inspiring and relevant Jewish communities.

Dr. Wolfson will be in St. Louis October 28 to speak at the "Can We Talk" event at the JCC. He is a very sought after speaker and his presentation will be worth attending.

Hazzan Joanna Dulkan passed along to me the name of a book she found inspiring. TOMORROW'S SYNAGOGUE TODAY: CREATING VIBRANT. CENTERS OF JEWISH LIFE, by Rabbi Hayim Herring.

Rabbi Herring spoke in St. Louis a few years ago on a topic related to this book. He encourages Jewish leaders to "stretch the imagination" to begin imagining and implementing new directions for their organizations. He encourages collaboration among synagogues and other Jewish institutions, instead of competing for the same members and donors. After reading the book, I agree with Hazzan Dulkan.

Most of my reading material I have found by way of web sites, facebook sources and links from emails. Here are a few.

eJewishphilanthropy.com - is delivered daily to my inbox with a few sentences of introduction and the author citation. Some of our local Jewish community leaders have been published on this site such as Marci Mayer Eisen of the Millstone Leadership Institution and Joel Frankel who is the concierge for young adult outreach and Brithright Next with Federation.

On Facebook I have "friended"...

Tablet Magazine - publishes a variety of articles with Jewish content. It is a good way to keep tabs on what is happening in Jewish communities, arts, music, thought, etc. across the world.

Concierge for Jewish Families with Young Children in St. Louis - a local Federation sponsored fb site that offers information about upcoming events for families, articles, tips for celebrating holidays and you may even see a Kol Rinah family event listed. In fact all of you young family KR fb users are encouraged to like us and this site to promote both. It helps the entire Jewish community when you show your support.

IHeartIsrael.org - the website and fb site names tell you all you need to know.

jUChicago - okay this is a shameless promotion from a proud mother. My daughter, Rachel manages the content for this page and is the Director of Engagement at jUChicago/Institute for the Next Jewish Future.

Get past my personal reasons for promoting this site and you will learn what is attracting Jewish college students and young adults to connect with and celebrate their Judaism with their Jewish peers.

Daniel Libenson is the founder and director of jU and is frequently published and considered a thought leader in the area of engaging Jewish young adults. Google his name as well.

That is my list and I hope you find something interesting and worthwhile in it. Please send me your favorite sites and those will be shared with members of Kol Rinah.

Kol Rinah Religious School

"It was evening and it was morning, one day" Genesis chapter 1. As the summer ended and the school year began and the holidays were upon us and as everyone around me became so engulfed and so busy and so rushed, it occurred to me. Stop. "Take time to appreciate what I have." Take time to appreciate what is around me and more importantly, who is around me. It is the who that is the most important element. The who are the people with whom we surround ourselves. Who are the people we do it all for as we create, experience and share our world?

We often complain about how busy we are, but busy is not always such a bad thing. Busy means we are doing. We may be doing mundane things, boring things, but busy can also mean we are creating memories, learning, building relationships, and connections.

I choose to appreciate and cherish each 24 hours. Yes, I will probably still be heard complaining about being too busy and wishing for a simpler maybe even a boring day. But, I choose to cherish the experiences of each and every day. "It was evening and it was morning, one day"

ADULT EDUCATION COMMITTEE
Presents: BOOK TALK with DR. NANCY BERG
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 3

Memory*: A Novel by Philippe Grimbert

Twenty years after his mother and father jumped to their deaths from a balcony, Philippe Grimbert has written a gripping novel about the hidden memories that dominated their lives. A colossal bestseller in Europe, Memory is the story of a family haunted by the secret of their past: an illicit love affair, a lost child, and a devastating betrayal dating back to the Second World War.

Nancy Berg is Professor of Hebrew and Comparative Literature at Washington University, where she also holds courtesy appointments in WGSS (Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies) and IAS (International and Area Studies). Her teaching includes courses on Hebrew, Jewish, and Middle Eastern literatures, and Israeli society. She has lived and worked in the Middle East - Cairo, Jerusalem, Tel Aviv - for several years.

Her first book, Exile from Exile, explores the writings of Israeli Jews from Iraq, heirs to the longest continuous Jewish community: Babylonian Jewry. She has completed a book manuscript We Remember Babylon, about the ways in which Israeli immigrant writers remember home.

Prof. Berg has also written on the Israeli mystery, women writers, food in literature, place, memory, and the choice of language. Works in progress include a study of the father-daughter relationship in Israeli literature, an anthology of exile, and a project on women's creativity.

She currently serves as president of the National Association of Professors of Hebrew.

Youth Programs

Tasha Kaminsky

tasha@kolrinahstl.org

We had a packed September. Between the holidays and our Chapter Membership Training retreat, Kol Rinah's youth were always on the move. Our USYers took to the Ozarks for their annual chapter retreat. Together they faced obstacle courses and physical challenges from climbing fantastic heights to zip lining in the dead of night. They took time to define what leadership was to them and had the guidance of Pirkei Avot text study to suggest parameters. The retreat was a blast and put us in the right place to greet the New Year.

Our teens organized and led their very own full Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur services. Learning opportunities were ample, and some of our recent Bar and Bat Mitzvah students had a chance to show off their newly acquired skills while they helped lead the teens of our congregation through the morning and Torah services. It wasn't all liturgy, as our teen service was punctuated several times by discussion breaks where we confronted societal trends and pieces of news that helped to foster conversations about the nature of redemption and forgiveness.

This October we have a slew of fun events planned for all of our youth. October 2nd marks our first Kadima dinner of the year. Give your middle school students a study break and send them to have dinner with their friends and blow off some steam with our USYers. If you can't join us on the 2nd, we will have another Kadima dinner on the 30th. Noar will have their very first get together on October 27th. KRSTL will also be holding several events for our high schoolers. Please check kolrinahstl.org/youth for lists and descriptions of all of our upcoming events.

Kol Rinah's Youth Commission is always looking for new and dedicated members who are ready to share ideas. Even if you aren't ready to join the commission, we still would love to hear from you. If you have any questions, comments, or concerns, or if you would like to help strengthen our Youth Department, please contact Tasha, tasha@kolrinahstl.org.
