"What to Do About the Solomons" by Bethany Ball

A Message from Our Rabbis

Rabbi Noah Arnow - Senior Rabbi

RabbiArnow@kolrinahstl.org

Trying Something New at Shul

My first year at Kol Rinah, Rabbi Brad Artson came as a scholar-in-residence, and I remember so clearly something he said. He asked, "Are you willing to make shul for the people who are not yet there?" What he meant by this was, "when we think about the way we construct the prayer experiences we offer, to what extent do we try to meet the needs of and engage people who are not currently being engaged by what we do?"

Some people reading this article might feel like Kol Rinah's current prayer services meet their spiritual needs just right. But I know that there are many members of our congregation whose spiritual needs are not being met by our prayer services. Maybe you are one of them.

It's hard, though, to try to change things without models for how they could be. And that's why I'm so excited Rabbi Lizzi Heydemann will be coming to Kol Rinah as our Scholar-in-Residence for the Shabbat of Presidents' Weekend, Friday-Saturday, February 14-15.

Rabbi Lizzi is the founder of Mishkan Chicago, an emergent Jewish community in Chicago. A Conservative rabbi, musician, and visionary (and friend of Rabbi Shafrin and me), Rabbi Lizzi had an idea of a different kind of community, and a different mode of prayer than existed in Chicago. So she started something new that is deeply rooted in traditional liturgy, yet not bound by it, that uses music and Torah and community to create something new.

At Kol Rinah in February, Rabbi Lizzi will give us a taste of what Mishkan is like, with a whole set of ideas of what a different model of prayer could look like at Kol Rinah. Friday night, she'll lead services in the style of Friday nights at Mishkan. And it may not be so different from what we already do on Friday nights! We'll also have dinner, and then study together with Rabbi Lizzi.

Saturday morning will be pretty different from our regular Shabbat morning services. She'll lead services with a guitar; we will not do the full liturgy; we will not read the entire Torah portion (but we will read the Ten Commandments, which is part of that week's reading!), we will not read the Haftarah, and we may not even get to Musaf. But we'll think, and listen, and sing, and pray, and learn, and breathe into a different way of being together on a Saturday morning. Following Kiddush, Rabbi Lizzi will lead us in a conversation processing our experiences of the Shabbat morning service.

I know that this will not feel familiar to many of us, and that's why we'll also have a quick but complete service in the chapel starting at around 7:45am, for anyone who wants to be at a traditional service, whether before or instead of this experimental Shabbat experience.

Please come join us for this special Shabbat, whether you like things the way they are, so you can give us feedback on how something different feels, or whether you're not someone who comes to services much, so that we can see if something different would speak to you more.

Change is hard, but as Psalm 96 reminds us, "Sing to God a new song!"

Rabbi Noah Arnow

Liz Collins, Elyse Picker - ECC Co-Directors

This fall season has been packed full of so many fun adventures in learning and family programs. For Fire Safety Prevention Week, the children of the ECC had a chance to meet some of the firefighters from the University City Fire Department. During their visit, students made their way around the perimeter of the firetruck taking notice of the variety of axes, ladders, and other equipment.

The Starfish and Penguin classes along with some of their parents visited Thies Farm while learning about the fall season and harvest. Children took a hayride around the property, found their way through a haystack maze, zip lined, and each got their own pumpkin.

On Sunday, November 10, we had our school book fair at the Novel Neighbor, an independent bookstore in Webster Groves. Miss Karen Kern brought her guitar and sang songs with us and children had an opportunity to decorate a book mark and create their own storybook while their parents shopped.

We are thankful for the families that joined us for our Thanksgiving program, which we celebrated with music and favorite foods like mashed sweet potatoes, cranberry applesauce, cornbread and mini pumpkin pies.

Meet Sarah Shulman Our New Youth Advisor

Sarah Shulman is so happy to be KRSTL's Youth Advisor and has loved getting to know the teens over the last few months! Sarah is a St. Louis native, but left to attend The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (ILL-)! After graduating in 2014, she moved back to St. Louis for graduate school at Maryville University where she received her Master of Music Therapy degree in 2017. Besides working with the awesome teens at KRSTL, Sarah works as a Music Therapist at St. Louis Children's Hospital and takes private clients and groups throughout the St. Louis area. She also sings with the St. Louis Women's Hope Chorale! Besides all things music, Sarah loves being Jewish, spending time outside (when the weather is nice, of course) and being with her family, friends and bunny rabbit. Her vices are babies, dogs and sushi and you can often find her gawking at one or the other. Sarah looks forward to meeting you if she has not yet had the opportunity to do so!

Ron Jacober

Legendary sports broadcaster, Ron Jacober took television broadcasting to a new level while working as the Sports Director of KMOX. Rather than just reading scores and doing an occasional interview, Jacober also introduced the idea of vignettes and one hour television sports specials, something unknown in those days.

Ron has over 40 years in the field of sports broadcasting with over 20 of those behind the microphone as he and partner Jay Randolph were the announcers for the St. Louis Cardinals televised games on Channel 5. Ron was inducted into the Missouri Sports Hall of Fame in 2013.

HAPPY SECULAR NEW YEAR!

The start of a new year brings a fresh start and perhaps new places.

December was a quiet month for the Men's Club. No special events, but some organizational activity that will lead to new officers elected in January.

We can announce that this year's guest for the Sports Dinner is pioneering sports announcer Ron Jacober. Jacober took television broadcasting to a new level while working as the Sports Director of KMOX. Rather than just reading scores and doing an occasional interview, Jacober introduced the idea of vignettes and one-hour television sports specials, something unknown in those early days.

Looking ahead, we continue to work on arrangements for Jews & Booze: Torah on Tap, a new opportunity to learn in a relaxed, causal space. This is open to everyone, women and men, over 21, of course.

OTHER COMING EVENTS:

January 19 – Men's Club Annual Sports Night

February 2 – World Wide Wrap, learn to lay Tefillin

A Conservative rabbi, musician, and visionary, Rabbi Lizzi had an idea of a different kind of community, and a different mode of prayer than existed in Chicago. Mishkan Chicago, while deeply rooted in traditional liturgy, is not bound by it and uses music, Torah, and community to create something new.

The weekend will include a special Friday Kabbalat Shabbat service and dinner as well as Shabbat morning services in the style of Mishkan Chicago.

More details after the first of the year.
