A Message from Our Rabbi

Rabbi Noah Arnow - Senior Rabbi

RabbiArnow@kolrinahstl.org

As I write this, we're in the midst of Sukkot; when you read this, we'll be on the other side of the Jewish holiday season. And it's been a busy holiday season at Kol Rinah, between programs in Elul to prepare for Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur, the High Holy Days themselves, tashlich, Sukkot, three evenings of Sukkot programming (Brotherhood, Young Families, and Sisterhood), a Shabbat Chol Hamoed program on end-of-life, Hoshana Rabba and an end-of-Hoshana Rabba klezmer concert, Shemini Atzeret with Yizkor (twice), and then Simchat Torah, both the evening and morning. Not to mention all the regular weekday, Shabbat and festival services.

We do a lot around the holidays! And there's much more we could do, too. By the time we even start thinking about Simchat Torah though, I'm exhausted — even if it's only August.

I love having all the smaller programs — relationships are formed in smaller gatherings, they're less overwhelming, can be more informal, and are easier to put on and run. Everything's easier with seven or thirty or fifty people rather than a hundred or two hundred. Having more small events also means we can appeal more specifically to the needs of different synagogue constituencies — including time, food, style, focus, and activities. It gives different groups an opportunity to take charge of something, too.

I also wonder though what a different model could look like. Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur are so exciting, in part, because of the energy of having so many people all present together. As it says in Proverbs 14:28, "The King dwells in the multitude of people," and we understand this to mean that God is [more] present in a big crowd than a small crowd.

What would it feel like to have a single synagogue-wide Sukkot event that would bring a much bigger crowd than we usually get for any single Sukkot program? It'd be much more challenging, and more energizing too. Would less Sukkot programming mean that we could focus on Simchat Torah more? Or should we perhaps de-emphasize Sukkot to really plan for and push and celebrate Simchat Torah?

How should we as a congregation plan and prioritize these things? Who should be making these decisions? If people want to have a program, should the answer automatically be yes? If we wanted to focus our efforts on Simchat Torah, how would/could we do that? Is it even necessary to focus — can we essentially have as many programs and events and services going on as people will plan, and assume that enough people will come to everything to make each thing worthwhile? Or if we plan too many things in a short span of time, does that mean there will be less attendance, less energy?

I don't have answers to these questions. But I do find myself curious, wondering. What do you think? How much programming is too much? Are we there? Is there value to slimming our offerings to focus more? Or not? Or not yet? And if we did want to focus, who chooses, and who has to say no, and who is told they can't do their program?

Synagogue life is surprisingly complex, and dynamic. I'm already looking forward to the holidays next year!

A Special Mazel Tov to Mazal tov to Lauren and Andrew Moss on the birth of their son, Sullivan Eli Moss, on August 15th. Happy sisters are Charlotte and Danielle; ecstatic grandfather is Jim Singman. All are doing well.

A Special Mazel Tov to Mazal Tov to Ben Horwitz and Nathan Goldstein. The Jewish Light will be giving them Unsung Heroes awards on December 7 at the Holocaust Museum.

Thank You

Thank you for the donations in honor of my 90th birthday. It was a wonderful surprise to receive the kind wishes from many friends in St. Louis. I miss you all but I know I am more secure here in Philly.

Best wishes,

President's Message

Gary Kodner - Kol Rinah President

president@kolrinahstl.org

Does anybody have the time?

I had a teacher at the Wydown Middle School who posted a sign next to the clock in her classroom that read: "If you have time to kill, work it to death". Somehow that message has stuck with me for 55 years.

How many of us have heard these lines?

- Time is money.
- Time waits for no one.
- Better three hours too soon than a minute too late.
- Lost time is never found again.
- Time is on our side.
- There is a time for everything, and a season for every purpose under the heavens. ...

So how much time do we really have?
How do we choose to spend our time?
The number one answer people give for not volunteering or accepting a leadership position at Kol Rinah is "I don't have the time." So what happens when we all say that? Having been in community leadership for years, I can confirm that it does take time. Human capital has been and will be our most critical component in succeeding with any of our goals. I will argue that we all can find time, or create the time in our lives for the things we most value. So why is Kol Rinah getting short changed on many of our agendas? We are all busy. We all have business and social interests, families, entertainment and sports. How can we carve out time for Kol Rinah? Can we all agree that our congregation is worth our time? Isn't it time we each found more time for Kol Rinah?

Monica Lynne Neidorff ECC

Liz Collins - Monica Lynne Neidorff Early Childhood Center Director

collinse@kolrinahstl.org

Fall is always such a wonderful time for our ECC. All of our classes have officially settled into this school year and have gotten acquainted with teachers, friends, and class routine. As you walk down the hallway, classrooms are decorated for Fall. Trees displayed in classroom windows that once had green leaves are now adorned with red, orange, yellow and brown leaves. Some of the leaves are dangling from the trees and some have fallen on the ground like you see when you walk outside. Classes could also be heard singing songs about Autumn leaves falling down and seen "raking" fake leaves into a pile to jump in.

In addition to learning, discussing, and creating artwork reflecting the changes in nature during the Fall, teachers were excited to share about the holidays of Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur, and Sukkot. Teachers spent time reading stories to the children about the holidays, showed them traditional symbols related to the holidays, and presented sensory bins filled with apples and bees, participated in an apple and honey tasting, and created holiday related artwork.

Engagement

Karen Kern, Interim Engagement Coordinator

karen@kolrinahstl.org

As I write, the air is cool and a tiny bit chilly, the leaves in my neighborhood are beginning to change colors, the High Holidays have come and gone in a blur and Sukkot is soon coming to an end. September and October were filled with an incredible amount of planning and hard work and the weeks were filled with services, events and so many beautiful opportunities for community connection. Thank you so much to everyone who planned, helped, volunteered, organized and attended these!

As we are in these early weeks of 5783, it may seem that things are quieting down. However, here at Kol Rinah, we have many ongoing and new opportunities happening in the coming months. Abraham Joshua Heschel said, "To attain a degree of spiritual security one cannot rely upon one's own resources. One needs an atmosphere, where the concern for the spirit is shared by a community." What an amazing and beautiful statement and one that I firmly believe Kol Rinah embraces. Our community works passionately to provide an atmosphere where care and concern for everyone's spiritual and overall well-being is upheld.

Please join us for our musical Friday night Kabbalat Shabbat services, our November Kol Chadash service with three guests from the Rabbinical Assembly, and Veterans Day Shabbat. For our families with young children join us for Tot Shabbat, and for our families with kids in elementary school, join our Kol HaMishpacha Family Shabbat. We also have several Kol Rinah Circles to choose from as well as a documentary movie event "Code Name Ayalon", a Trans 101 Workshop, and an Israel Democracy and Elections discussion with our shinshin Guy Dobrin.... all happening in November..... So many wonderful ways to come and be supported and connected.

Sisterhood

Linda Carton - Sisterhood President

genelin@att.net

We're into November and the past few months have been good for Sisterhood.

The Supper in the Sukkot event went great and was enjoyed by all who attended. The baked potatoes, vegetarian chili and salad was delicious as was the brownies and ice cream for dessert. Rabbi Arnow joined us and gave the blessing for sitting in a sukkah. Wendy Love Anderson gave a beautiful presentation about the many meanings of a "sukkah".

We're almost at the end of our membership campaign and want to thank all those ladies who have joined already. We expect that we'll see a few more members join before the campaign ends. Your membership dues go to support the synagogue in many ways like helping our youth group, KoREH, ECC and other ways the synagogue may need help.

In September we had a wonderful program with P'nenah Goldstein talking about how she wrote the book "The Girl from Sighet: A Memoir". There also was a chance to ask her questions about how she came up with ideas for the book.

Sisterhood is working on ideas for programs for the coming year as well as planning for activities we regularly hold such as the Torah Fund Campaign which benefits conservative seminaries around the world and supporting the Mislach Manot program and providing candy and Shabbos candles and holders for new member gift bags.
