

REMEMBRANCE

“May the soul of the departed be bound up in the bond of life forever”. This hope is expressed in the Jewish funeral service. Our understanding of what this hope means is our key to knowing what immortality means in a modern Jewish sense.

Just how is a soul bound up in the bond of life? Who does the binding? What is the bond of life? These are the questions we must ponder as we seek to penetrate the mystery.

It is we – you and I - who do the binding. We do this through acts of remembrance. The bond of life is that which some have called the great chain of being, the continuity of life, or the permanent possibility of being. Simply expressed, “life goes on,” and each of us has a place on life’s continuum.

One of the mediations before Kaddish in Gates of Prayer asks whether people can disappear so long as children remember their parents.

Five times during the year we Jews are asked to remember: Yahrzeit, Yizkor on Yom Kippur, and Yizkor again on the Festivals of Sukkot, Pesach and Shavuot. Remembrance is the act of binding souls into the bond of life.

We look at the faded photographs of our children or grandchildren, and, somehow, we catch a glimpse of immortality. We come across a diary or a collection of letters written long ago by the hand of a relative now long gone from this earth, and we have yet another intimation of immortality. We call to mind someone whose life touched ours, and we remember. So long as we are remembered, we partake of immortality.

There is a Hebrew phrase we say when mentioning the names of the departed: Zichronam li-v'racha, “May their memory be a blessing.” That, too, is our hope. Not merely to be remembered, but to be remembered for a blessing. We are remembered for blessing if we have blessed others by our lives.

May the memory of those whose names are inscribed in the Book of Remembrance be for a blessing, and may our remembrance of them inspire us to live our lives in such a way as to bring blessings to others. In so living may we bind up souls in continuing bonds of life.

Dedicated

to our loved ones, those whom we can never surrender or forget, who are ever a part of us.

Their names appear here in print but the impress of their lives,
the love they bore us, and the love we have for them,
are indelibly etched on our hearts and our minds.

May their sacred memory ever inspire us to noble resolves and to acts of loving kindness.
