Prayer is less about changing the world than it is about changing ourselves.

Rabbi David Wolpe

We would love to have you join us for our Break-Fast-Buffer (RSVP required) after Yom Kippur services on September 19th.

Welcome the New Year with us at Temple Isaiah as we join together in inspirational prayer and introspection led by Rabbi David Lazar, and enjoy the uplifting music of Prayer Leader, Rabbi Ariel Pollak.

❖ From the President's Desk Soo Borson, M.D.

The High Holidays are here at last – this very special space of somber stocktaking, reflection, and inner search admixed with joy and sweetness. We come together to do this private inventory of our souls in company, and to renew our commitment to our faith, to our synagogue, and to the work of becoming better people in the year to come. To foster the inward turning of our thoughts as we move into the New Year, my President's column this month will be brief – and you won't see my usual finance column or many announcements; there's plenty of time for that later. (But I am happy to announce that we ended our last fiscal year in the black – for the first time, it seems, in memory.)

Before I forget – do get your tickets for our inaugural classical music and art series in the Bochner, starting September 22 (templeisaiahps.com or classicalpalmsprings.com), and mark your calendar for our next congregation potluck and conversation from 6-8 pm on September 25. We'll start in the Sukkah but move our potluck inside if attendance and weather tell us to. The theme is The Torah of Togetherness – forming a true spiritual community.

Gratitude

My theme this month is – simply – gratitude. Remember our Gratitude Shabbat earlier this year?

Let's make it an annual spring tradition! There is so very much to be grateful for. I'll start with our incredible and incredibly generous volunteers – who welcome the stranger and the familiar, and support everything we do. This is the first year we've had a fully functional corps of volunteers doing everything from washing windows and polishing brass rails to mailing Yahrzeit notices, weeding garden beds, replenishing supplies, making mishaberach calls, calling congregants to offer Torah honors, keeping our sound system humming, making sure we have home baked treats for Onegs, and so much more. Our first-ever volunteer coordinator, Tom Stansbury, created a comprehensive volunteer handbook to make sure that even novices know what to do and how to do it. Our landscape redevelopment group, led by Larry Fechter, has been amazing – just wait til next year when you see the full fruits of their labor! The skills of our building caretaker, Jason Brown, are transforming our physical plant. Next, our amazing Temple Isaiah administrator and woman-of-all-work, Larea Pettersen, who stepped so easily into her new role this year that all we heard was the hum of a well-oiled machine. The people who get the word out to us and about us – Miriam Bent, our longest-serving editor and publicist, and our new-media expert Madalina Garza. Our board of trustees – whose job this year has been tougher than usual but who've come through it all wiser and more skillful – may it ever be so! Cantor Joseph Gole – who brings traditional cantorial style and the mind of a true Tzaddik to our congregation from time to time. Our gabbais – Sandie Ovesen (who doubles as our lifetime supervolunteer) and Peter Gordon, whose smile welcomes you to services. Our Rebbetzin – Sascha Lazar, widely known as the Angel of Temple Isaiah, whose kindness flows freely toward everyone she meets; she is our teacher in the art of generosity – may we all be diligent in our study of her quiet, gentle lessons. And now, to our Rabbi David: my gratitude for true partnership in working to create a community in which we all will want to live, for the profound ethical grounding of all he does, and for his ever-deepening spiritual leadership of our congregation.

L'Shanah Tovah! See you at Temple.

From the Rabbi's Study Rabbi David Lazar

Many of you know that I have been spending two days each week in Los Angeles over the last few months as a spiritual counseling intern at Beit T'Shuvah (BTS), the renowned Jewish addiction recovery facility.

BTS' own mission statement speaks for itself:

Beit T'Shuvah's faith-based model integrates spirituality, psychotherapy, the 12 Steps, and the creative arts. It is through this holistic approach that we aim to change the stigma of addiction, heal the people suffering, and ultimately save as many lives as we possibly can.

My training is in anticipation of opening our own outpatient drug rehab center at Temple Isaiah this coming January. While the Beit T'Shuvah model--a full-service residential facility right in the heart of a big city with a significant Jewish population--is somewhat different than what we have planned for Temple Isaiah, we have much to learn from BTS and its 30 years' experience identifying and meeting the needs of recovering addicts

One of the tools developed by Rabbi Mark Borowitz, senior rabbi, and the spiritual counseling staff of BTS is a weekly t'shuvah group. The word t'shuvah most often understood as "repentance, return, and response," and these weekly meetings offer residents an opportunity for cheshbon hanefesh, to check check in with themselves, to take stock of what they've done well in the week that has passed and what did not go well for them.

Participants are handed a two-sided form. On one side of the page are the following questions:

1. What/How did I do well?
2. Why was this important?
3. Who was impacted and how?
4. What did I learn, and what is my plan (for enhancing, sustaining, growing, etc.)

On the other side are the questions:

1. When/How did I miss the mark?
2. What was my justification in the moment for this action?

3. Who was impacted and how?
4. What did I learn, and what's my plan (for not repeating, changing, growing, etc.)

The participants first fill out these forms; then, in the safe space of their t'shuvah group led by their spiritual counselor, they discuss their responses to the form, and the opportunities it offers them.

I have had the privilege of watching this best practice in action each week now over the summer and learned not only about how it works with those seeking recovery, but how it works for me! After all, we have some sort of t'shuvah to do, and of course, I am no different.

So I'd like to suggest that all of us at Temple Isaiah—members and guests—utilize the Beit T'Shuvah questions above in the coming weeks of the High Holidays, as we take stock of our own actions and misdeeds of the last year. The questions can provide a useful format as we reflect and resolve for our personal growth in the coming year.

We will have a chance to hear Rabbi Borowitz this March as part of our Judaism for the 21st Century lecture series. He will speak on the importance of community in the healing and recovery process.

It is our hope and vision to further develop our congregation as a place of welcoming and embracing those who seek a spiritual community--among them, those in recovery from addictions of many kinds.

Shanah Tovah U'metukah!
